Cambodia Invaded By Saigon Forces

Times News Services

More South Vietnamese troops were reported moving toward the Cambodian frontier today following the first crossing of the border that Saigon forces are claimed to have made since the Vietnam ceasefire.

But in Saigon today, the South Vietnam military command formally denied its troops had penetrated Cambodian territory.

Spokesman Col. Le Trung Hein said that reports of a South Vietnamese army operation into Cambodia's Takeo region, as carried by foreign news agencies and radio stations, "are false."

"At the present time," he said, "the South Vietnamese army is not carrying out any operations on Cambodian territory."

However, journalists at Tinh Bien reported a regiment of South Vietnamese rangers, backed by 25 armored troop carriers, crossed the border between Chau Doc and Takeo to push back units of the North Vietnamese first division.

The reports indicated that the South Vietnamese operations along the border were defensive, aimed at driving Communist forces from the border rather than the start of a major offensive to lift the threat to Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital.

South Vietnamese air force gunships joined an armored column on the Cambodian side of the border, and new fighting was reported on the Vietnamese side of the frontier.

The Viet Cong called the march into Cambodia "a blunt and very dangerous act of the Saigon military forces."

A Viet Cong broadcast said the operation was ordered by the United States and "criminally violates the independence, unification, sovereignty, neutrality and territorial integrity of Cambodia as well as the Paris agreement and the international agreement on Vietnam."

The U.S. appeared more concerned with events in neighboring Laos. In Washington today, the defence department warned that because of new fighting in Laos, it may order U.S. planes to renew bombing campaigns there.

Pentagon spokesman Jerry Friedheim said North Vietnamese forces led by tanks had overrun the Laotian town of the Vieng, defended by Laotian government forces, within the last several hours.

He described it as "a major violation of the ceasefire."

He said an announcement about whether U.S. B-52 bombers had begun renewed strikes over Laos would come from Pacific command head-

EVERYTHING KOSHER

Manchester Guardian

SOUTHAMPTON, Eng. — With 10 rabbis on board to supervise koshering procedures and 30 servicemen guarding its vital points, the Queen Elizabeth sailed on its month-long cruise to Israel Sunday shortly after reports were received that Israeli intelligence sources had heard rumors that Arab guerrillas planned a suicide mission against the 60,000-ton liner.

Some sources were talking of a kamikaze air attack, others of a speedboat loaded with explosives driven against the ship's hull. But aboard the QE-2 all was calm, secure and kosher.

"I think we are doing more good for world peace by making this voyage for Israel's 25th anniversary than by being scared off," said Rabbi Samuel Korff, spiritual leader of the 500, predominantly U.S., Jews aboard.

Four Drown In Weekend Accidents

BILLY VOSPER
. . . drowning victim

Four persons from the Greater Victoria area, three of them from one family, lost their lives Saturday in two boating accidents on Vancouver Island.

Lost in the first accident which happened on Buttle Lake near Campbell River are WO John Daniel Vosper, 48, of 2356 Tacon; his wife Myrtle Lylian, 44, and their youngest son William Bentley, 11.

Dennis John Lynch, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Lynch of 1972 St. Anne, was drowned when the canoe in which he and Keith Gage-Cole, 25, of 2405 Hamiota, were shooting rapids near the mouth of the Nimpkish River overturned, throwing them into a whirlpool.

Although there were lifejackets in the two-seater canoe neither of the two men was wearing them at the time.

The Vospers' 14-year-old daughter, Linda Coleen, was also in the family's 10-foot aluminum boat when it was swamped, throwing the four into five-foot swells.

Vosper, who worked as a steward in the Chief Petty Officers' mess at CFB Esquimalt, was meet manager for the Coho Swim Club at the Centennial Pool in Langford.

Al Aylard, the team's coach, said today that Mrs. Vosper, too, was extremely active with the club.

"Mickey was a great woman," he said, "she worked very hard on all kinds of committees."

They were between two sets of rapids when their craft overturned. Gage-Cole managed to pull the canoe to shore and paddled about a mile downstream to a Crown Zellerbach campsite at Beaver Cove.

A campsite worker travelled two miles to Port McNeill and phoned the RCMP detachment at Port Hardy.

The police arrived on the scene at 8:45 p.m. They were joined in the search for Lynch's body by 24 people from the campsite and three crew members from the coast guard cutter Racer.

The search was resumed Sunday morning and divers found Lynch's body pinned on a ledge about 30 feet below the surface.

The search is still continu-

A Long Lonely Wait . . .

By STEPHEN BREWER
Special to The Times

CAMPBELL RIVER — Hoping against all reason, 14-year-old Linda Colleen Vosper watched Sunday as police divers braved the icy waters of Buttle Lake to search for the bodies of her father and brother.

The girl, who had been plucked from the same waters hours earlier, watched with little visible emotion.

By dusk, when police ended their search for the day, her tears had dried and her face had set in a mask of shock.

The tragedy which had befallen Linda had come home to her.

On Saturday she had been part of a family of four, pitching a camp in the Ralph River campground beside the lake, which was to become a common grave for her father and brother and the killer of her mother.

With the help of his wife, Myrtle Lylian, 44, and his son, William Bentley, 11, and Linda he pitched his tent trailer in a campsite at the provincial campground, 35 miles southwest of here.

After the tent was pitched the family loaded into their 10-foot aluminum boat to brave the choppy waters of the lake.

Then at about 3:30 p.m. tragedy struck.

Texas Twister Terror

Tornadoes slammed into three Texas towns Sunday killing eight persons and injuring 35. Flooding took two more lives. Property damage was estimated at several millions of dollars. Thunderstorms, hail and strong winds which followed hit almost every section of the state.

The first tornado hit Plainview, one of the homes damaged is shown above, in which three people were killed. Later, another twister hit Pearsall, killing five while the third tornado hit Corsicana, about 50 miles south of Dallas. The persons killed in the Pearsall twister were found alongside the freeway among pieces of cars.

'Esso Dealer' Ad Nonsense

A spokesman for automotive retailers in British Columbia today dismissed a protest advertisement by "concerned Esso dealers" as "nonsense."

J. Lloyd Kinneard, secretary of the Automotive Retailers Association, was commenting on a three-column page-deep advertisement in the Vancouver Province which called on the government to "set aside" the Energy Act which received legislative approval Saturday. (See Story Page 20).

The advertisement said that "even though the automotive industry has called for government legislation to deal with certain injustices taking place in our industry, we the concerned Esso dealers of B.C. do protest the speed with which Bill 148 (the Energy Act) has been rushed through legislature."

The anonymous dealers, who signed themselves "the concerned Esso dealers of B.C., their employees and families," said the Energy Act should have been set aside for necessary discussion.

They said the act could be detrimental to the public, is an encroachment on free enterprise, "takes away our basic rights under the Bill of Human Rights," that there has been insufficient time to study and make representations concerning the act and, that the Energy Commission "has complete dictatorial powers unaffected by any judicial act."

GM TO HELP FIRENZA TRADE-IN

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) General Motors of Canada Ltd. announced today it is offering the original owners of its imported compact Firenza a $250 credit if they trade in their vehicles on a 1973 or future GM car.

The offer follows a series of complaints from owners of the British-made Firenza and the company's decision to stop importing the vehicle.

The Victoria distributor, Empress Pontiac Buick, says it has not heard from GM on the matter, but expects the credit will apply here, too.

Woman Slain In Revenge

BELFAST (AP) — A 59-year-old Protestant housewife answering a knock at her door was killed about midnight Sunday night by gunmen who didn't see their victim.

Security forces say Margaret Miller might have been shot in revenge for the slaying 24 hours earlier of Robert Millen, 23, one of the few Protestants in the Irish Republican Army.

Four bullets ripped through the front door of Mrs. Miller's Belfast home, hitting her in the chest as she came down the hall to answer the door. Her killer jumped into a waiting car and escaped.

Millen was shot from a speeding car in Belfast Saturday night while on a vigilante patrol with other members of the IRA's Marxist Official wing. He was believed the first Protestant member of the largely Roman Catholic IRA to die since communal warfare broke out in Northern Ireland nearly four years ago.

The deaths of Mrs. Miller and Millen raised the confirmed fatality toll in the strife to 774.

Meanwhile, in Dublin, Sean MacStiofain, former chief of staff of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, was released from jail today and said: "I remain an unrepentant Republican separatist."

MacStiofain, 44, looked pale and drawn from his 59-day hunger strike.

"I'm not well physically but in good spirits," he said.

Hooson Out Of City Post

By ROLAND MORGAN
Times Staff

Victoria city manager Bill Hooson was asked for his resignation by city council Friday, after just over two years in the $25,000 a year position.

Hooson's departure was effective immediately and his desk had been cleared today.

An official city hall bulletin from the mayor's office blamed Hooson's inability to keep up with "very substantial increases" in the complexity and load of the city administration. He is 52.

Ald. Percy Frampton said in an interview: "Bill's a hell of a good guy but he hasn't been well.

"In the last few months he hasn't been the executive officer we would have hoped.

"This is a pretty tough racket and a guy's got to be pretty tough."

Financial expert Jim Bramley, comptroller-treasurer, has been appointed acting city manager. He is the senior city executive.

"We've agonized over this for the past six months," Mayor Peter Pollen said.

He said the decision to ask for Hooson's resignation was reached in a closed meeting of council members Friday night and finalized on Saturday.

The social work graduate joined the city staff as assistant welfare officer in 1950 and began welfare administrator in 1951.

He was appointed assistant city manager in 1964 and took over the city from manager Dennis Young in December, 1970.

Hooson rarely sought or achieved headlines. One of his few appearances before the public eye was in 1968 when as assistant city manager he had to smash down the door of a reluctant householder in the Rose-Blanshard slum clearance scheme.

In 1972 Ald. Percy Frampton claimed Hooson was being bypassed in Mayor Pollen's new policy of encouraging aldermen to consult directly with city hall department heads.

The official statement said council would be asked to of-

Colcel Forests 'Under-Used'

Control of over nine million acres of valuable forest lands in northwest B.C. and the west Kootenays, by what was virtually an absentee landlord, has resulted in serious under-use of the resource, the legislature was told today.

Resources Minister Bob Williams said the land controlled by Columbia Cellulose Limited was effectively "enclosed" from the people of B.C. and the company's failure to manage it properly "has been a cost to this province."

He was moving second reading of a bill which would establish a new Crown corporation called British Columbia Cellulose Limited to manage the government's controlling interest in the operations of Columbia Cellulose Limited.

The legislation would also ratify an agreement signed April 2 under which the government will acquire 79 per cent of the assets of Canadian Cellulose Company Limited — Colcel's principal operating subsidiary — in return for guaranteeing long-term debts amounting to more than $70.5 million which are owed by Canadian Cellulose to bondholders, banks and investors.

Williams said the legislation is an attempt to meet the problems of two major regions of B.C. which include the northwest cities of Prince Rupert and Terrace as well as the communities of Revelstoke, Nakuskp and Castlegar in the southern interior.

He noted that the two "older line" parties, the Liberals and Conservatives, had supported similar legislation last week which would set up a crown corporation to manage the paper operation in the coastal town of Ocean Falls.

He said he welcomes that change of attitude, and added that the economic and "human problems" must merit similar support in the case of Colcel.

Williams said the principle involved is the same in ensuring the economic future and livelihood of not just a small community but a major region of the province.

He said the land involved — "one and a half times the size of the state of Switzerland" — has been alienated in the same way that common lands in Britain were enclosed hundreds of years ago, and in the case of the Arrow Lakes that has meant "the trees have been grossly underused for decades."

MEDICINE BLOCKED

PINE RIDGE, S.D. (UPI) — A helicopter loaded with medical supplies was prevented from entering Wounded Knee Sunday by local Oglala Sioux Indians who vowed to keep all supplies out of the hamlet until militant Indians end their 48-day occupation.

Federal authorities, caught in the squeeze of trying to keep local peace and end the occupation without bloodshed, apparently gave in to the local Indians when the helicopter was turned back at federal roadblock No. 1.

Meanwhile, an attorney for American Indian Movement (AIM) members entrenched at Wounded Knee said in New York Sunday he would attempt to obtain a restraining order against the local Indians who set up the blockade of supplies.

Reports of sporadic shooting in the Wounded Knee area early Sunday remained unconfirmed today. A rancher, George Coats, said four armed men came to his ranch and drove off several head of his cattle.

There were no negotiations scheduled today between government officials and Indians occupying Wounded Knee. The militants possibly were awaiting the outcome of the scheduled court appearance of two AIM leaders in the U.S. district court at Pierre, S.D., today.

The band of about a dozen local Indians trying to prevent supplies from entering Wounded Knee set up their own roadblock outside the federal perimeter surrounding the hamlet and flatly rejected government requests to pull down the barrier.

The Indians called themselves "irate citizens" and the "original residents of Wounded Knee." They said their action was prompted by the government's failure to get militants to abandon their occupation.

Although the Indians involved were not the same ones who earlier set up a roadblock under direction of Oglala Sioux tribal chairman Dick Wilson, Wilson said he was "behind them 100 per cent."

$120 for Second-Hand Jeans On Black Market in Russia

By VINCENT BUIST

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Genuine American jeans are the hottest line now being peddled in the second-hand markets of Soviet cities despite police action to stamp out speculation.

They sell for a standard black-market price of 100 rubles (about $120) a pair in the used clothing markets of cities like Odessa, Baku, Lvov, Moscow and Leningrad. This represents a profit of more than 1,000 per cent which is split between the "importer," often a sailor, and the black market hawker.

Ownership of a pair of American jeans brings its own problems—chief among tem a high risk of loss.

A young Frenchman in Moscow who went to a city swimming pool dried off and went to retrieve his clothes, only to find his American jeans had disappeared. Fortunately, in their place, someone had left a pair of tattered Russian pants.

Much the same misadventure befell a young Russian student who changed in his gymnasium for a workout and also discovered that his jeans had exercised an overwhelming attraction for someone else. He had to wait until his mother came in a taxi with a spare pair of pants.

Jeans are popular among youngsters throughout the Eastern bloc and the Polish state clothing industry has tried to meet the demand by producing its own version.

But only genuine American jeans will meet the standards of the Soviet marketplace. Bellbottoms are preferred.

If a lad in Moscow receives the wrong kind he is likely to spend the next 48 hours soaking his jeans in water, with stiff boards inside the bottom of the legs to try to achieve a modified bellbottom effect.

Almost anything foreign which is either of good quality or a novelty—or both—sells well. Men's patent leather shoes also fetch up to $120 and there is a steady demand for Japanese wristwatches with large dials—as well as Western ties, nylon jackets and multi-colored shirts.

Authorities admit it is virtually impossible to stamp out the peddlers although the markets are occasionally shut down if the police find black marketeering becoming too blatant.

Soviet industry has made great strides in meeting consumer demand but it still lacks the range, quality and attractiveness of some Western products.

The Soviet teen-age market is expanding rapidly. Soviet consumer industry is more and more taking into account schoolboys' taste since parents have plenty of spare cash to indulge juvenile whims.

A recent teen-age novelty, for example, is a pair of bellbottom pants adorned around the waist, or at the bottom, with jingling bells—or with zippers running down the outside calf.

But schools find that simply ridiculing trese youthful excesses does more harm than good. It can breed resistance which finds an outlet in opposing authority in other ways.

War Footing In Libya

CAIRO (Reuter) — president Modmmar Khadafy of Libya has pledged to suspend all existing laws and distribute arms to the people in a new revolutationary program which they must accept — or he will quit.

The fiery young army colonel, dedicated to returning the country to direct rule by Islamic law, told a mass rally his new five-point program will "purge Libya from political sickness."

Khadafy said the Arab nation is in need of "men, arms and vengeance — from the Israeli enemy."

He also disclosed that he offered to send thousands of Arab volunteers to defend Lebanon, but the Beirut government declined. He also claimed world support for Libya's view that the shooting down of a Libyan airliner by Israeli fighters over Sinai last February was an act that should be "punished in kind."

The Libyan leader's speech, monitored here, set down these main points:

Suspension of all laws which would be substituted with measures and penalties based on existing conditions.

A purge of the country's political sickness and of those "importingg" destructive ideas — this was taken to be a reference to communism — to ensure that freedom was shared by all.

An oar slipped from Vosper's grasp.

The boat began rocking from side to side, buffetted by five-foot swells.

The four managed to keep the boat upright by shifting from side to side until they miscalculated and the boat was swamped.

The family was thrown into the lake and the boat sank rapidly.

She made it halfway there before her form was seen in the water by a passing motorist.

By then she had swum almost half a mile.

The motorist, whom the police have been unable to identify, borrowed a boat and went to Linda's rescue.

Almost before she had been pulled aboard the rescuing craft she gasped out the story of her family's plight.

The rescuer returned to shore and sped 25 miles to Strathcona Park Lodge, from where the RCMP were summoned.

A search was started immediately by police and a Labrador helicopter from CFB Comox but no sign of the missing persons was found.

Then, just before dark, the body of a woman believed to be Mrs. Vosper washed ashore.

Linda was brought to Campbell River where she spent the night at the home of a member of the local RCMP detachment.

On Sunday police and the Canadian armed forces were back at the lake searching without hope of success for the bodies of Linda's father and brother.

Divers probed the depths of the lake, which falls to depths of more than 150 feet in the area of the boating tragedy.

Helicopters hovered overhead, searching for some sign of the bodies.

By dusk, however, nothing had been found.

Linda and an uncle, who had travelled to Campbell River to take charge of his niece, returned to Victoria where they're faced with the task of explaining Saturday's tragedy to Linda's surviving brother and sister, Daniel, 16, and Kathy, 18.

Police today are continuing their search.

Oil in Vancouver said he didn't know how the advertisement reached newspapers but was sure it wasn't anything to do with the company but rather a move by a group of individual dealers.

Kinneard said the people who placed the advertisement "do not represent the thinking of the trade, our association and most of the Esso dealers in B.C."

He said his group asked the government to pass legislation "to rectify some bad trade abuses" and while the act doesn't do all of this, it does set up a tribunal to hear and act on complaints.

Asked if the Energy Act should be delayed, he said, "thank God it has been passed. It's been long delayed. Any more delay would accomplish absolutely nothing."

A small group of Shell Oil dealers met Attorney-General Alex Macdonald Friday in an unsuccessful bid to delay passage of the act.

Shell dealers spokesman Bob Dunsmuir said he was unhappy his group was able to speak to Macdonald for only five minutes. However, he added that the Automotive Retailers Association had been consulted by the government before the act was introduced March 22.

He said while his group is pleased with some provisions of the legislation, it is concerned the act will lead to reductions in retail prices without corresponding decreases in wholesale prices.

"Basically, we want time to digest the bill. It encompassed lots of things we wanted but it is also very far-reaching. The legislation could let them take over our businesses," he said.

quarters in Hawaii later today.

U.S. bombers have been hitting Cambodian targets for about six weeks. There have been no American air strikes in Vietnam since the ceasefire was signed Jan. 27.

Friedheim said there has been heavy fighting near Tha Vieng for the past few days.

U.S. planes, attacking for the 40th consecutive day, pounded Communist troop concentrations within seven miles of Phnom Penh today in what military sources called an attempt to relieve the besieged suburb of Takhmau.

The raids were some of the closest carried out by American warplanes to the Cambodian capital.

Communist forces pumped more than 100 rounds of artillery fire into the southern outskirts of Phnom Penh today, killing three persons and wounding 12.

Military police said most of the casualties in the attack—the first shelling of the Cambodian capital in more than for months — were civilians.

Heavy fighting continued in an area where Communist troops are reported to have been massing the last few days.

Some outlying positions have already been evacuated and other settlements are encircled, military cources said.

In Phnom Penh, gripped by serious shortages, seven oil tankers and barges were unloading fuel, food and amunition today.

The ships broke through the Communist blockade on the Mekong River Sunday, although one ammunition barge was hit and destroyed in an ambush just inside the South Vietnamese border.

The capital has supplies of fuel for 10 days for civilian transport and a little longer for electricity and water supplies. The U.S. Air Force is flying in aviation fuel.

The statement read in part:

"The responsibility for the proper administration must necessarily rest with the city manager, and, accordingly, council unanimously determined to request the resignation of Mr. William Hooson.

"Naturally, such a decision and the request for his resignation was made without discussion or debate in public but this matter received careful and full consideration by all members of council. Mr. Hooson has indicated, however, that he wishes to be formally relieved of his duties.

"This measure has been taken by council with the deepest of regret since Mr. Hooson is respected and well-liked by all members of council and he has served the city loyally and strenuously over the past years."

One of two members of the board of administration in the city of Vancouver, and that city's chief planning officer were recently fired by a newly-elected city council.

Asked to confirm the development earlier today, Ald. Malcolm Anderson said: "That's new to me."

Ald. Clyde Savage said: "There is something going on, but I wouldn't like to make any comment.

World's Biggest Hydro Project Now Under Way

KINSHASA (AP) — Zaire has launched the first stage of a power project due to rank among the world's greatest hydroelectric schemes.

By taming the mighty Congo River, planners say, the Inga project has an ultimate generating capacity of a staggering 30,000 megawatts when completed in the next century.

That is 20 to 30 times the capacity of most of the world's big hydroelectric plants. A megawatt is a million watts.

Inga, about 30 miles north of the port of Matadi in the southwestern part of what was once the Belgian Congo, will eventually dwarf such African dams as the Cabora Bassa in Mozambique, the Kariba of Rhodesia and Zambia and Egypt's High Aswan.

Only a fraction—3,000 megawatts—of Inga's potential will be put to use in the next decade. Part of this will be tapped first to feed the country's growing industrial base in Kinshasa, the capital.

By 1976 Inga is scheduled to be linked across some 1,000 miles of lush jungle southeast to the power-thirsty mines of Shaba, formerly known as Katanga.

Zaire, a vast, mineral-rich country of 20 million, can then expand Inga's output as demand requires. Officials hope the dam will be the powerhouse that makes this underdeveloped central African nation a modern industrial state.

Inga owes its potential to a quirk of nature.

At that point along the 2,718-mile river, the water level plunges some 245 feet over a distance of about 15 miles. This momentum produces a flow every second of 32,500 cubic yards at low water and 87,000 cubic yards when in flood.

Mr. Justice Gregory Dies From Gunshot in Head

Mr. Justice George F. Gregory of the B.C. Supreme Court died in Vancouver early Sunday morning from a gunshot wound, apparently self-inflicted.

The 56-year-old native Victorian had been suffering from failing health for about two years and recently underwent a stomach operation.

Police said Mr. Justice Gregory's body was discovered by his wife, Martha, when she returned to their home about midnight Saturday after meeting a visitor at Vancouver International Airport.

A .357 magnum revolver was found near his body in the backyard of their home.

Mr. Justice Gregory was born in Victoria and educated at St. Michael's School, Oak Bay and Victoria high schools, Victoria College and U.B.C. He graduated from Harvard University Law School in 1941.

He was called to the bar that same year, just before he began four years of service with the Royal Canadian Navy.

He was wounded during the sinking of HMCS Charlottetown in 1942 but returned to active service and won the Distinguished Service Cross two years later.

After the war he returned to Victoria and began practising law.

Mr. Justice Gregory was active in community life in the city, serving at various times as president of the board of directors of the Community Chest and president of the Gyro Club.

In November, 1953, he was elected Liberal MLA for Victoria in a byelection held in an attempt to win a seat for Socred Einar Gunderson.

He served in the legislature until 1960 and was known as a sharp critic of the Social Credit administration. In 1959 he was a contender for the provincial Liberal leadership but withdrew his name before the party convention.

In 1964 he followed in the footsteps of his father, Hon. Mr. Justice F. B. Gregory, and was sworn in as B.C. Supreme Court judge.

His grandfather, Mr. Justice George F. Gregory, was also Supreme Court judge in New Brunswick.

On his appointment he moved to Vancouver with his wife, two daughters, Margaret Nan and Frances Ann, and his son, Richard.

A private memorial service will be held in Vancouver this week.

Chief Justice J. O. Wilson of the B.C. Supreme Court said Sunday he would give a brief memorial speech in court today.

'Friendly and Frank'

In a recent address to a Chicago audience interested in foreign relations, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp did a good job of explaining Canada's position in relation to the United States. Although such addresses have been delivered many times before, Mr. Sharp's contribution was particularly appropriate in these days when the natural frictions between a large nation in a period of serious readjustment and a smaller country asserting its interests are more apparent.

The punchline of Mr. Sharp's speech was the keynote of his message. He gave his audience this quotation: "The true sovereigns of a country are those who determine its mind, its mode of thinking, its tastes, its principles; and we cannot consent to lodge this sovereignty in the hands of strangers."

He told his listeners that these were not the words of a Canadian nationalist speaking in 1973, but an excerpt from an address delivered at the University of Philadelphia in 1823. "It was good advice for Americans 150 years ago," Mr. Sharp said. "I suggest it is equally good advice for Canadians today."

The quotation followed a brief resume of the problems of a country living next to a giant neighbor. Mr. Sharp said Canadians were faced with the question of devising a way in which to live in harmony with the United States. He listed three possible options: One was to continue as we are with a minimum of policy adjustments. The second was "to move deliberately toward closer integration with the United States." And the third was to "pursue a comprehensive, long-term strategy to develop and strengthen the Canadian economy and other aspects of our national life" and so "reduce Canadian vulnerability."

Since we face a progression of events rather than a static situation, the first choice would inevitably have the same result as the second—integration with the American economy and social structure. The third avenue, said Mr. Sharp, must be the choice of Canadians. It would be designed to make the economy "more resilient to external shocks" through development of a more balanced and efficient basis. It would call for greater Canadian ownership, and for facing up squarely to our relations with our neighbor. Without a positive long-term policy we could "find ourselves integrated by default."

Mr. Sharp stressed that this is not an anti-American outlook. A strong Canada would be of benefit to our neighbor as well, since our market and our trade would be more stable, and could serve to counteract protectionist forces in the world.

Mr. Sharp used another quotation to support his stand. He said, "No self-respecting nation can or should accept the proposition that it should always be economically dependent upon any other nation." They were the words of President Nixon when he visited Ottawa last year.

It is not known what effect Mr. Sharp's address had on the Chicago Council of Foreign Relations. Introduced as "friendly and frank," it should have been convincing. For the same reason it should be given close attention by Canadians from coast to coast. For it dealt with the basics of Canadianism, which so often appear to be forgotten in the welter of day-to-day decisions and personal striving.

Tobacco Merry-Go-Round

Utah's Democratic Senator Frank Moss is trying once again to convince his fellow senators of the lack of logic in American action on cigarettes. He points out that the government now spends $3 million a year to discourage smoking, regarded as a serious health hazard. At the same time, it spends $30 million to subsidize tobacco growers.

The apparent contradiction in objectives does not make good sense, but presumably it makes good politics.

Senator Moss seeks support for a move to eliminate the subsidies, but provide assistance to present tobacco farmers who change to other useful and non-harmful crops. Over the years, his efforts have been frustrated.

Senators from tobacco-growing states have a neat device to torpedo the Moss proposals. They have succeeded in having the issue referred to the Senate Agricultural Committee, whose membership is heavily loaded with members from tobacco-growing states. The committee does not hold hearings on the Moss proposal. When the Senator from Utah tries to introduce the issue to the full Senate, a member from the tobacco states says that body should not consider a matter on which no hearings have been held.

So the merry-go-round revolves: $3 million to discourage smoking, $30 million to support the producers of the tobacco.

Eskimo Art

For two significant reasons, Indian Affairs Minister Chretien's report on the success of Eskimo artists should be gratifying to Canadians. The people of the Far North are strengthening a vital cultural heritage and the popularity of the product is giving to a number of them an income well beyond the average for their compatriots.

The native art forms in prints and in stone have an appeal of their own. The fluidity of line, the attractive texture in the carvings and the strong attachment to natural forms have found a justifiable market in southern Canada and elsewhere.

In an era when so much criticism is heard about the destructive influence of the white man on indigenous peoples remote from 20th century society, it is pleasing to learn of the ready reception given to this expression of native creative ability. It is worth noting, also, that the development has been widely encouraged and stimulated not only by people who buy the Eskimo output but by gifted white people who have helped the Eskimos to improve their skills.

MAURICE WESTERN

The Matter of Indian Rights

OTTAWA — As the Government confined itself to evasive action in the House debate on Indian policy, the situation remains as thoroughly confused as it was before the committee vote endorsing the concept of Aboriginal Title.

There can be no joy in this for Jean Chretien. An energetic and sympathetic Minister, he can fairly claim to have accomplished more of practical value for the advancement of the Indian people than most of his predecessors. Indeed, in the case of the Yukon Indians, he has induced the Government to enter into negotiations which may well be regarded as consonant with the recognition of aboriginal rights.

But the government cannot bring itself to recognize what it often appears to recognize and no longer, as in 1968, explicitly denies. Its non-position is an advance on its former position since it has made progress possible in western Canada. The major threat, however, is in the east. It is far from clear that Mr. Chretien's own objectives there are being well served by the uncertain policy with which he is fetterd.

Never Done Before

In his speech of Wednesday, on a motion to concur in the committee's report, the Minister said: "Concerning non-treaty Indians, on the basis of the rights acquired by them in 1673 as a result of the Proclamation by King George III, the Government feels that their problems must be settled equitably. This is a new start in that field, something that has never been done before."

Why surround a new start with new confusion? The Proclamation was declaratory of aboriginal rights which were deemed to exist. It was the basis of policy for two centuries, however deficient policy may have been. The treaties speak for themselves; they involved formal surrenders of aboriginal title. But now, suddenly, the Government is enormously impressed with the Proclamation but cannot bring itself to recognize — although it does not now deny — the rights with which the Proclamation dealt.

It is beyond question, as Mr. Chretien says, that the problems differ from one province or territory to another. The fact is, however, that they have a common root. They have been complicated by our constitutional development; the Indians now face the Crown in the right of Canada and the Crown in the right of a province. Thus, in the Nishga case, as the Minister rightly noted, the ball is now clearly in Mr. Barrett's court.

But the federal Government, despite frequent derelictions of duty by its predecessors, still has a constitutional responsility which it ought now to be affirming with great force. The situation of greatest difficulty at the moment is the James Bay problem. This was summed up in a surprisingly strong speech by Gerard Laprise, Social Credit member for Abitibi—surprising because Social Crediters in the past have not taken a conspicuous part in debates on Indian affairs.

Mr. Laprise said: "There is at the moment large scale development in this area, all of it in territory that belongs to the Indians, to the natives. There, as elsewhere, the problem is that the Government of Quebec simply told the natives: Move over, we are coming!"

It is obvious that Mr. Chretien's personal view is not very different, "I said to the Quebec Government and I repeat it today — the best course the Quebec Government could have followed would have been to offer a generous settlement along the lines asked for by the Indians."

JEAN CHRETIEN
. . . a new start

Excellent advice. Mr. Chretien also deserves commendation for funding the Indians in the present Quebec litigation. But does this exhaust the federal responsibility? Quebec obtained the territory on the basis of an agreement to which the federal Government was a party. The terms safeguarded the very rights which are now being coldly ignored. But Ottawa takes no position in the courts and adopts a non-position when Parliament is asked to recognize aboriginal rights.

"I wonder", asked Mr. Laprise, "whether we could not go so far as to force the Government of Quebec to abide by the treaties concluded when the territory was granted through a Confederation Act."

It is obvious that Liberal members are greatly troubled by the present situation. Mark MacGuigan, usually a persuasive speaker, sought to show that the resolution was irresponsible, parading a variety of legal objections.

Thus, he picked on a phrase, "to the satisfaction of the Indian people involved." Then, noting that the Indians are in a bargaining position, he asked: "Do I have to remind honorable members opposite that this is our country, too. Would it not be advisable, in a document which they are asking the Parliament of Canada to approve and accept and endorse, that we say what we mean? Do we mean it is only Indians that should approve or do we mean also the Government and Parliament of Canada?"

This baffles belief. We are apparently to suppose that recognition of aboriginal rights would leave the Government, Parliament and Canada's white majority naked and helpless. It presupposes an equality in bargaining which never existed, never could exist and was never, under the traditional theory, understood to exist since one party to the bargaining is a sovereign power.

Nothing Given Away

The answer in fact was provided by another Liberal, the committee chairman, Judd Buchanan, who came very close to endorsing the resolution and may have done so. He quoted a witness before the committee, Peter Cumming of Osgoode Hall law school. "As Parliament has complete control over any legislative settlement of aboriginal rights, nothing is really 'being given away' through the recognition of such rights and the negotiation of a fair settlement."

If the Government is embarrassed over this question, the explanation is not to be found in a set of legal difficulties but in the political difficulty created by the ambitions of an impatient Quebec administration. But the political dangers may also have been exaggerated.

Why should the federal Liberals incur any particular odium through a stronger stand when all the other parties — including Social Credit, on the basis of the speech by Mr. Laprise — all take that stronger stand? Flora Macdonald, opening the debate, declared flatly that the Conservatives "give wholehearted recognition to the concept of aboriginal rights". In her words, there were "no ifs, no ands, no perhaps's".

On that basis, the Government can scarcely be attacked if it liberates itself from present confusions and strikes out boldly on a course that would probably find warm support from many Liberal members.

PAUL WHITELAW

Canada and the Neighbors

WASHINGTON — Overshadowed by the confrontation and Latin rhetoric marking the current general assembly here of the Organization of American States (OAS), Canada last week marked the first anniversary of its permanent observer mission to the organization.

Quietly attempting to fulfil the role envisaged in Canada's 1970 foreign policy review — to develop relations with Latin American countries and institutions — the most obvious example of Canada's presence was a brief, but thoughtful speech delivered by Pierre de Bane, parliamentary secretary to the external affairs minister.

In between the required diplomatic niceties and an item-by-item review of Canada's activities in Latin America, the MP for Matane, Que., diplomatically joined the chorus for change in OAS which has dominated the assembly.

Time of Transition

"This assembly's agenda and the discussions of recent meetings have made it clear that this is a time of transition in the OAS," said Mr. de Bane, speaking in French.

"We see the OAS engaged in a fundamental review and reassessment of its structures and activities, charting new paths for the future and considering how to involve non-member countries and even non-hemispheric countries in its developmental activities," Mr. de Bane continued.

In the careful language typical of a document that has been drafted, screened and approved by the myriad levels of external affairs in Washington and Ottawa, Mr. de Bane noted that there has been a "substantial shift of emphasis in Latin America, as elsewhere, to economic and social problems." Then the useful parliamentary secretary noted that "this is a shift welcomed by Canada" although the country has become "disturbed" by the confrontations which have marked recent OAS discussions.

The language was obtuse, but it was clear to diplomats here that Canada endorses the growing desire to revamp the OAS — even possibly to the extent of eventual Canadian membership in the group.

Canada's status since last year has been that of a permanent observer but non-member, represented at OAS headquarters here by Ambassador Alfred Pick.

Mr. de Bane told the assembled delegates Monday that Canadian association with the organization will depend on the results of the "review and revision" that is taking place. He also noted that the welcome shift to social and economic interests coincides with Canada's belief that it is in these two areas in which it can make the greatest contribution.

PIERRE de BANE
. . . chorus for change

The desire for change is focused in several different directions, naturally enough, at a time when the smug old notion that all countries in the Americas share common interests is coming under question.

As Mr. de Bane noted, Canada is "disturbed" by some of these new developments — the "confrontations."

It is also quietly enthusiastic about other suggested changes. In the speech he read Monday, Mr. de Bane was apparently alluding to the suggestions of Carlos Sanz de Santamaria, the chairman of the Inter-American Committee on the Alliance for Progress (CIAP), an OAS institution.

Mr. Sanz de Santamaria last week suggested that the OAS general assembly consider reforming CIAP so that non-Latin American countries such as Canda and even European nations might participate fully as members . . . an aide to Mr. Sanz de Santamaria said that the new group would closely resemble the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development, the "OECD" of the European Common Market in which Canada is a member.

Broader Membership

Membership in the new Latin American organization foreseen by Mr. Sanz de Santamaria would be open "to the participation of industrialized countries . . . motivated by a broad concept of long range, reciprocal interest . . ." These new members could participate, he told the OAS assembly, in the "transfer of technology," capital and managerial skills and in the promotion and diversification of trade."

Canada' interest, therefore, in Mr. Sanz de Santamaria's suggestion is more than altruistic; membership in such an enlarged OAS economic group, if it is eventually approved by OAS members, could open up valuable new markets for Canadian goods and expertise. There is also a negative motivation: if other industrialized nations become interested in the idea, Canada would certainly like to be in on the action, too.

Editorial Correspondence

Chicks

I would like to draw your attention to an article which appeared in the Saturday, March 30, issue of the Times in connection with Frontenac Versatile Reg'd. embalming chicks as Easter gifts for children. I find this process the most disgusting display of macabre sadism I have ever had the misfortune to discover. I not only question the intelligence and sanity of the person who could conceive such a thing; but also that of the parents who would buy them. I would think that influencing supposedly mature adults to make barbaric purchases is sufficiently revolting, but to use sadism as the basis for a child's gift is beyond comprehension.

I am doubly shocked that these chickens are created by a Canadian firm. It upsets me deeply to realize that Canada would allow this to continue.

I am not a vegetarian, nor do I find it immoral to kill animals for meat. I am perfectly aware that the laws of nature dictate that animals kill each other for suvival; however to do as this firm has done and make death a remote thing of morbid fascination is despicable. Furthermore, to portray it as such to a child is actually beyond contempt. I fervently hope that some action will be taken to prevent this abhorrent act from continuing any longer. — Celia L. McArthur, 89 Howe.

60 YEARS AGO

From The Times of April 16, 1913:

TORONTO — The water famine in Toronto, which started yesterday afternoon when the attempt to clean out the tunnel through which the city water is pumped had to be abandoned, still exists, though the citizens have been promised relief by tonight. The northern and western parts of the city are completely without water, while in the downtown districts only the lower flats of buildings receive a scanty supply. Over 1,500 head of cattle stalled in cars at the Union Station yards have not been watered since four o'clock yesterday.

It's Not So Easy Being an Irishman Any More

By J. P. O'CALLAGHAN

(O'Callaghan is publisher of the Windsor Star)

Once, it was so easy to be Irish.

To fit the role designed for you in North America, all that was required was a cheerful indolence, a head for liquor and a strangled tenor voice to use in leading the party in a late-night chorus of When Irish Eyes are Smiling. (It mattered not that that particular ditty owed its origins more to the school of New York Jewish inventiveness than to Dublin's O'Connell Street.)

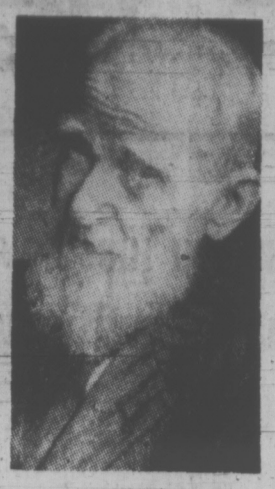
It also helped if you were argumentative, agin the government (Up the Republic) and congenitally late for even the noon mass on Sunday. It was expected of you.

The stage Irish (or perhaps the English version of the strange breed) inevitably carried a blackthorn stick and kept pigs in the kitchen.

You polished the image a bit by talking of the uncle shot by the British. It's just a variation on a theme, of course — if you are a Scot, you have had an ancestor or two hanged for sheep-stealing; if you are Irish, it's the uncle who died in a foggy glen.

It's so much more romantic than admitting he died of melancholia at the age of 94, a life-long bachelor whose bones were sodden to the marrow by all those gentle mists.

But there's no escaping the image and the thirst. Who was it said that an "Irish queer was a man who preferred women to drink"? And then there was the Frank O'Connor character who cried, "Well thanks be to the Almighty God, we had wan grand dirty night."



SHAW
. . . his own Olympus

There are times when that sounded like the epitaph for a race that takes itself less seriously than most — but the excesses of that self-deprecating humor are based on a bitterness, an acceptance of the black comedy aspects of life rather than the rich, ribtickling fun of self-indulgence.

There is a profundity to be found at the bottom of a glass and every Irishman has stared at his share of empty goblets, for there is nothing more rewarding than to fire off the epigrams from the tip of a drink-slippery tongue.

After all, the master of the epigram was Oscar Wilde, and he was Irish (albeit, a shadow Irishman). But Wilde had the Irishman's built-in capacity for self-destruction, acquired, no doubt, from rubbing shoulders with the Gaels, for most Anglo-Irish Wasps succumb eventually to the pervasive influence of that race of great talkers.

Not all of them; G. B. S. had the gift of the gab, but he survived the self-destructive destiny by clinging to some Shavian Olympus of his own making. (And, in any case, he had a wife who looked so far down her nose at the companions of her husband's youth that her will left a considerable sum of money for the sole purpose of teaching the Irish proper manners, such as using a fork instead of a knife for the peas.)

Brendan Behan destroyed himself, playing out his clown's role in public to the diabetic, drunken end. And what a tragic waste of talent that was! Even through the fumes that engulfed him in the last few days he still gave glimpses of a gift for storytelling that was right up with the best of Sean O'Casey.

Trying hard to fit the stereotype these days is another remarkably talented Dubliner named Christy Brown. Seemingly a helpless, speechless, lolling unfortunate being unable to control any part of his anatomy except his big toe, he burst into the literary world some three years ago with a rollicking, though tragic, account of his own life called Down All the Days. It was written painstakingly by foot and has so far produced more than $250,000 for its author.

Brown conceals his inner thoughts beneath the sort of exaggerated sense of humor that would have appealed to Behan. Asked recently in what ways he had used his money to overcome his handicaps, Brown replied: "My new-found wealth was really a problem at first, but then I hit on the idea of opening the first brothel strictly and exclusively for Christian Brothers (a teaching order of priests). The girls have been carefully selected from the ranks of the Poor Clares, a very charitable combination, don't you think?"

Brown is a classic misfit, cruelly treated by nature. Behan was a social misfit. So was Wilde. Is that another role that Irishmen are doomed to play — never quite winning acceptance no matter what they achieve?

The Behans and the Browns play out their bucolic roles because that is what the world expects of them. The Irish are never contrary, just inconsistent.

What race but the Irish would claim a Spanish-American teetoller as one of its greatest men: De Valera was at least one-quarter Irish; Sean MacStiofan, that angry Provo who tired quickly of a prison fast, was the English-born son of English parents.

Could de Valera be Irish? Could MacStiofan? William Butler Yeats never quite made it. Despite the fact that his family had left Yorkshire some 250 years before, he was still under slight suspicion as an Anglo-Irish poet, rather than the revolutionary Irishman he was. Richard Brindsley Sheridan never quite made it as an Irishman. Neither did Dean Swift or Oliver Goldsmith.

Padraic Pearse did, though he had an English father, too. But Pearse symbolized all the contradictions of the Irish. The wild-eyed romantic, who wrote the Proclamation of the Republic and read it to the puzzled bystanders of the General Post Office in Dublin in the 1916 uprising, spent his last night on earth writing gently of "little towns in Connacht, things young and happy. And then my heart hath told me: these will pass, will pass and change, will die and be no more, things bright and green, things young and happy; and I have gone upon my way, sorrowful." The British took this talented poet from his cell the morning after he wrote that, and put him to death.

BEHAN
. . . clown's role

But that was 57 years ago. Why bring it up now?

Because it is still evergreen in Irish memories just as is the murder of Michael Collins along the back road from Bandon in his own county of Cork in 1922. There are still Irishmen who blame de Valera for that. Be that as it may, it is part of the pattern of self-destruction, the urge for the Irish to destroy the best of themselves.

But despite it all, the exile still found it comfortable to be an Irishman—until five years ago.

The scandalous indifference of the non-Irish—and especially the British—toward the historical injustices was overlooked by the immigrant, who found it easier to shrug off his past than his name.

But now it's all changed. There is a realization that the romantic Ireland of popular conception doesn't exist at all and perhaps never did. Now, there are Irish and there are Irish. There are two races (Anglo-Saxon and Gael) and there are two religions and two Irelands and there are hate and fury.

No one asks you to lead a chorus of When Irish Eyes Are Smiling any more. Instead, they want your solution to the "Irish troubles." There isn't a solution — there are hundreds and none bears much relation to reality or compromise. They are all totally unworkable in the passions of the time.

It once used to be said that the world is full of Irish — those who are, and those who wished they were. But today, there is no longer any percentage in being an Irishman.

No, it's not easy to be Irish any more, but we still have faith, for "I am come of the seed of the people, the people that sorrow, that have no treasure but hope."

Crime, Drug Link Questioned

By TOM WICKER
New York Times

No one maintains that the abuse of drugs is a good thing, and no one denies that it has some relationship to crime. But the report of the National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse, just handed to President Nixon, and much testimony before the New York legislative committees studying Governor Rockefeller's hard-line proposals, suggest that there is no real cause for panic about drug abuse and its effect on crime.

The commission, after a two-year study directed by former Republican Gov. Raymond P. Shafer of Pennsylvania, concluded for example that "without question the most serious drug problem in the country today" is dependence on alcohol — not on heroin or speed.

Alcohol is not generally thought of as a drug, so the commission noted that many people think of "a martini as something fundamentally different from a marijuana cigarette, a barbiturate capsule, or a bag of heroin." But alcohol has more addicts than any other drug; it is more damaging to the body than any other; it probably causes more violence and domestic discord; and its toll in traffic accidents alone is fearful.

Contrary to the rationale of both the Nixon and Rockefeller anti-drug programs, the Shafer Commission also pointed out that "it is difficult if not impossible to establish a direct relationship between crime and the use of various drugs."

This view was supported by Dr. Thomas E. Bryant, president of the Drug Abuse Council, in testimony before New York legislative committees on the Rockefeller plan. Dr. Bryant pointed out that of all the drugs to be reached by the program, only the amphetamines in some circumstances might of themselves cause violent behavior. Heroin in the body, for example, causes "an inability to concentrate, apathy, lessened physical activity and lethargy" — and in itself could hardly be a stimulus to sidewalk muggings.

Many people do commit crimes to pay for expensive heroin habits, but Dr. Bryant insisted that there were no good statistics on how often this occurs or how many crimes are violent, and that there were "undoubtedly many persons now using heroin who would engage in criminal behavior even if they did not use heroin." He cited a 1970 study by Herman Kahn's Hudson Institute — hardly a citadel of soft-headed do-gooders — that showed New York City's 70,000 addicts responsible for, at most, only $500 million in theft per year, which is bad enough.

Neither the Shafer Commission nor Dr. Bryant conceded the reasoning behind the Rockefeller and Nixon programs — that all else having failed, a hardline legal crackdown on the drug problem is necessary to safeguard the innocent public. Dr. Bryant argued that it is not even true that all other means have failed; there were less than 20,000 heroin addicts in treatment in the U.S. in 1969, he said, but 100,000 are projected to be in treatment in 1973. Moreover, as he pointed out, "only now are sufficient resources beginning to be available to deal with serious drug abuse as a massive problem" — and the Nixon administration is itself providing much of the increase.

Even if all else had failed, however, there is no evidence at all that a crack-down will be the answer; quite the opposite. In 1914, the U.S. for the first time outlawed the non-medical use of narcotics. By the mid-1920s, one-third of federal prison inmates were behind bars on some kind of drug charge. But drug use had not declined; it had increased.

It continued to increase, so much so that by 1951 Congress passed a two-year mandatory minimum sentence for a first conviction. So drug use went right on increasing until in 1956, the mandatory minimum was changed to five years, and the death sentence was provided for anyone over 21 selling heroin to anyone under 21. Still, drug use continued to rise until in 1970 it finally dawned on Congress and the Nixon administration that "getting tough" had proved to be no answer at all.

WARNING TO CANADA IN ITT CASE

THE TORONTO STAR

When the people of Chile democratically elected a Marxist, Salvador Allende, as president in 1970 it was almost too much for the giant American-owned International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation (ITT).

ITT had extensive holdings in Chile and Allende had made no bones about the fact that he proposed to take them over as quickly as possible.

Under the circumstances, it was understandable that the corporation would go to Washington for help. But what ITT had in mind was more than a government-backed protest. If the word of one of ITT's top executives is to be believed, the corporation wanted help from the White House and the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) to overthrow the Allende government.

A sub-committee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in Washington last month was told the CIA was offered $1 million to subvert the Chilean economy, start riots leading to a military takeover or do whatever was necessary to prevent Allende's election.

According to the testimony, plans were developed at lower levels in the CIA to approach select members of the Chilean armed forces "in an attempt to have them lead some sort of uprising." The subversion program included trying to get American banks in Chile to suspend operations and thus create economic problems that could bring about Allende's downfall. Nothing actually happened; both the CIA's plans and those of ITT were rejected at the top.

This is pretty disturbing stuff, nonetheless. Particularly for Canadians who have more American investment than any other country in the world.

But one cannot help wondering what would happen if Canada decided to restrict the operation of American corporations transporting needed raw materials — oil, for instance — to the U.S.

Would American corporations be on the doorstep of the CIA offering money for help in influencing political decisions so that American rather than Canadian interests got top priority?

Perhaps the ITT testimony is a warning to Canada of the dangers in allowing foreign-owned firms to become involved in strategic resource areas.

Church Maverick Lauds Mao

By JOHN BURNS
The Globe and Mail

PEKING — The elders of the church might find it hard to believe, or perhaps they wouldn't — a former moderator of the Presbyterian Church of Canada propped up in a Chinese hospital bed quoting Chairman Mao Tse Tung, referring roguishly to "Chairman Jesus" and avowing in all earnestness that Canadian churches have much to learn from the father of Chinese Communism.

With five years experience as a missionary in Manchuria in the thirties, E. H. (Ted) Johnson is no newcomer to China, but it is only since he was hospitalized in Peking with an inflamed appendix that he has had the time to study the writings of Chairman Mao — and to conclude that the 79-year-old Chinese leader has "a tremendous amount to teach the Canadian church."

Now Chairman Mao is no admirer of religion and has even described gods and goddesses as "miserable objects" in his writings, so praise of those same writings might seem incongruous coming from one of Canada's leading churchmen. But when that churchman is Dr. Johnson it is perhaps not so strange.

Firstly he has something of a reputation as a maverick, espousing ideas and causes that are not always popular with mainstream opinion in the church. And then there is his family heritage. His late uncle, Hewlett Johnson, was nicknamed the red dean by the British press when, as Dean of Canterbury, he wrote sympathetically of the achievements of Communism in Russia and China.

So there he is, ensconced in a tight little room on the second floor of Peking's Capital Hospital, fussed over by a squad of solicitous doctors and nurses and seizing every spare minute to bury himself in volume one of the chairman's selected works, underlining passages he finds particularly appealing with a borrowed ballpoint pen.

"You know," he says, waving the volume in the air for emphasis, "the man really has tremendous gifts as a teacher. You cannot help being impressed with his great humanitarianism, his repeated rejection of dogmatism and his tremendous faith in the creative gifts of the individual human being."

Such philosophical conceptions, of course, are no more the exclusive property of Maoism than they are of Christianity, and Dr. Johnson is quick to acknowledge as much. So what he would like to borrow for the church in Canada is not so much the chairman's philosophy as his teachings on the application of it in everyday life.

In particular he would like to see the church adopt the Maoist practice of calling for a total commitment from all those in its constituency. "At present the church in Canada doesn't ask for anything but the fringes of a person's life, and that is all it gets," he says. "Compare that with this" — again the book is waved — "which challenges the individual to make a complete commitment."

And what would this mean to the average churchgoer in Canada? "Well, I'll give you an example," says Dr. Johnson. "Chairman Jesus teaches that when you see a hungry man on the street you should give him food. Now our churchgoers hear that when they sit in their pews on Sunday, but do they do it on Monday? Not very many of them do."

Another example? "Well, take an elder of the United Church in Canada. He may be a director of a company like Brascan, making fantastic profits in a country where there is a tremendous gulf between the few who are very rich and the many who are very poor. But does the church attempt to persuade this man what he as a Christian should be doing as a director of such a company? Of course it does not.

"Compare this with Chairman Mao. He has some extraordinarily luminous insights into human problems and one of them is that human considerations must always take precedence over economic and technological development. This is a lesson that every Chinese is expected to absorb and to put into practice in his daily life."

Another Maoist practice Dr. Johnson would like to see adopted by the church in Canada is the insistence on people at the grassroots — peasants and workers in China, ordinary worshippers in the case of the church — being involved in discussions of policy and, to the extent that it is possible, in the decision-making process itself.

"The church has to adopt structures that involve the individual and put life into his membership of the church. If you read Mr. Mao you see the tremendous faith he has in the creative gifts of the human being and his conviction that anything can be achieved if only these energies can be released, for example by participation in the political process.

"This is the kind of thing we have got to try and achieve in the church. Instead of offering a believer a cold pew once a week, we are going to have to involve him, challenge him. We are going to have to make him truly a member of the church, as a peasant is a member of a commune."

If such espousal of Maoism surprises Dr. Johnson's colleagues in the Presbyterian heirarchy, it is doubtless a source of satisfaction to his Chinese hosts — not least because he is one of the very few churchmen, if not the only one, admitted to China as such since the cultural revolution.

He applied for his visa in his capacity as chairman of the Canada-China relations committee established by the Canadian Council of Churches, whose principal objective is the dissemination of knowledge about China in Canada and the encouragement of Chinese studies at every level of the Canadian educational system.

If churchmen are rare among visitors to China former missionaries are even rarer. Canadian diplomats here believe Dr. Johnson is the first Canadian missionary allowed to return in his capacity as a churchman since the Communists expelled all missionaries shortly after their takeover in 1949.

Greek Easter Bread That's Easy to Make

Come Easter morning, awaken your family with the tantalizing aroma of freshly baked bread. Just watch your "sleepy-heads" suddenly appear in the kitchen!

½ cup milk
¼ cup granulated sugar
¾ tsp. salt
2 tbsp. soft butter
⅓ cup warm water
1 tsp. granulated sugar
1 envelope dry yeast
1 egg, well beaten
2½ to 3 cups sifted all purpose flour
¼ cup currants
½ cup chopped almonds melted butter
¾ cup sifted icing sugar
1 tbsp. milk
whole blanched almonds
candied cherries

Scald the ½ cup milk; stir in the ¼ cup granulated sugar, salt and butter. Cool to lukewarm. Meanwhile measure water into a large warm bowl; stir in the 1 tsp. sugar. Sprinkle with yeast. Let stand 10 minutes then stir well. Stir in lukewarm milk mixture and egg. Add 1½ cups of the flour and beat for 2 to 3 minutes with electric mixer, at medium speed, or until smooth. Add and mix in currants and almonds. Gradually stir in sufficient additional flour to make a soft dough, 1 to 2 cups more. Turn out dough onto lightly-floured board or canvas and knead until smooth and elastic (5 to 10 minutes.) Place dough in a buttered bowl. Cover with plastic wrap and towel and let rest in a warm place 30 minutes. Punch down dough. Turn out onto lightly floured board or canvas. Divide dough into three equal portions. Shape into 3 round loaves. Place loaves on a buttered cookie sheet, in the shape of a three petaled flower. Brush top with melted butter. Cover dough loosely with plastic wrap. Place bread in refrigerator set at moderately cold setting for 2 to 24 hours. Remove dough 20 minutes before baking, uncover and let rise in a warm place. Meanwhile, preheat oven to 375F. bake in preheated oven 35 to 40 minutes. Remove from cookie sheet and cool on cake rack. Combine the ¾ cup icing sugar and the 1 tbsp. milk and pour over each of the three loaves. Arrange almonds and cherries in flower shapes on frosting. Cut into thin slices and serve with butter. Makes 1 three leaf flower shaped bread.

It was anything but pretty and sometimes the motor conked out, but when the lowland lakes fishing season opened on the weekend around Seattle, anglers grabbed anything that floated to try their luck.

MACHINE COPIES BODY

Times News Services

LONDON — The invention of a new electronic device will enable airport security officials to examine a three-dimensional image of a passenger's body and detect both metal and plastic objects if concealed under clothing.

The technique, invented by two English electronic engineers and called "microwave holography," was explained in the publication of the Institution of Electrical Engineers. The device sees through the clothes of a fully dressed man or woman and creates an image of the unclothed body.

The engineers, R. D. Orme and professor A. P. Anderson, both of Sheffield University in Yorkshire, said that the images the device produced would be blurred and modest.

They said, "The microwave might pick out a particularly well built man, but a women's secrets would be quite safe."

They said that their invention could equally well be used in the search of oil.

Welfare Plan On Way

OTTAWA (CP) — Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde will present a federal government policy statement to the Commons Wednesday dealing with a proposed revamping of welfare programs, sources said Monday.

Mr. Lalonde has said his department has been working on a model welfare plan to be presented to provincial ministers when they meet here for a conference next week.

The federal government promised in their January throne speech that efforts would be made to overhaul welfare programs to make them more responsive to varying provincial needs.

Since then Mr. Lalonde has been meeting with provincial ministers and officials to sound out their opinions on welfare plans.

Judge Criticizes Minister For Closing Girls' School

The closure of Willingdon School for Girls in Burnaby, ordered March 1 by Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi, has created serious problems, juvenile authorities claim.

Provincial court Judge Stanley Wardill of Nanaimo and district supervisor of juveniles, Mrs. R. A. Weston, as well as a Victoria probation officer, have criticized the move "because there are no alternative facilities available."

Wardill said that several delinquent girls are free in Nanaimo because of the reform school closure, part of the NDP government's policy of treating children in their own communities.

One girl, Wardill said, faces a charge of being unmanageable under the protection of children' act, likes taking drugs and has admitted she would like to become a prostitute.

"The probation report states that this girl is in need of care and treatment, but there are no facilitities in Nanaimo for this, and since Mr. Levi closed Willingdon there now is nowhere to send her," Wardill said.

"The only thing to do is send her back out on the street."

Mrs. Weston agreed and said there is "nothing we can do" to help delinquent girls. Willingdon, she said, did serve a purpose, "but Mr. Levi felt it was the communities' responsibility to treat and care for these girls."

She said a brief has been sent to Levi outlining a proposal to set up a diagnostic and reception centre in the Nanaimo area, "but I think there will have to be some backing from parents in the community to get something done."

Senior probation officer for provincial court juvenile division in Victoria, Brian Malin, agreed with Wardill's charges.

"We're facing the problem of having no institutional facilities available for holding or retaining delinquent girls. In that he (Wardill) is certainly right," Malin said.

"I feel there is a need for something like Wilingdon," Malin said, "although Willingdon was not necessarily the answer."

Contacted today, Levi again stressed the need for children to be treated in their own communities.

He said, "If any community comes to us with a proposal, we will look at it," and added his staff is now in the midst of studying the Nanaimo proposal.

'55 Medals in '73

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian soldiers with the International Commission of Control and Supervision in South Vietnam might get medals for their service, but they shouldn't hold their breath waiting.

Last week, former army Maj. Jean Berthiaume received a medal in the mail for his service in Vietnam.

He served with the International Control Commission in North Vietnam in 1955, less than a year after the French surrender at Dien Bien Phu.

Nearly 1,000 Canadian soldiers who served with the ICC in North Vietnam are eligible for the medals, which did not start arriving until two weeks ago.

"I was told it was because the 1955 mandate wasn't over until four months ago," Maj. Berthiaume said. "But it's hard to believe it would take so long."

Fisheries Reject Shared Protection Costs

The Fisheries Association of British Columbia today rejected a suggestion from the Council of Forest Industries that fishermen should pay part of the costs of stream protection.

Fisheries Association manager Kenneth Campbell told the legislature committee on forestry and fishing that timber companies should pay costs of streambank protection during logging because they reap the benefits of tree-cutting.

In an earlier brief to the commitee, the Council of Forest Industries urged that costs involved in protecting streams during logging should be shared by beneficiaries, including fishermen.

"We completely disagree with this view," Campbell said.

"The forest industry is asking you to accept the argument that someone should pay them for not silting the streams, for not altering the normal temperatures, for not causing streams to dry up, for not causing flash floods and alterations in stream courses," Campbell said.

"We know that many streams have been ruined in the past as a result of poor logging practices. We think the forest industry can operate without serious damage to the environment."

Campbell said it was up to the forestry firms to improve their methods and-or accept higher harvesting costs.

The committee of MLAs took no sides in the controversy at this stage but will study the countering claims by the two industries over the summer.

Two other briefs presented to the committee today took issue with the veto powers held by the B.C. Forest Service in forestry management practices.

The Steelhead Society of British Columbia told the committee a minimum width of 66 feet should remain intact on either side of a river of stream throughout its entire length.

This greenbank should be under the exclusive jurisdiction of the fish and wildlife branch, not the B.C. forest service, the brief says.

The steelhead society urges a moratorium on all streambank logging until permanent guidelines are adopted by the provincial government.

In addition to the 66-foot strip, there should be a zone 600 feet wide along rivers and streams in which various industries could share jurisdiction.

There might be some logging but prior rights would go to fish and wildlife and public needs, according to the steelhead society's proposal.

Veto power of the B.C. forest service was attacked by the B.C. Chapter of the Canadian Society of Environmental Biologists.

G. R. Peterson of Vancouver said the society feels a new department or commission should be formed to integrate resource planning.

"No single agency is at present qualified to make integrated resource decisions, nor should any existing single agency be charged with this responsibility," he said.

He singled out the B.C. forest service, which, he said, holds total veto powers for protection of water-based resources.

The biologists also recommended that forestry firms be encouraged to make their timber-cutting plans known to the government five years in advance of cutting so other resource agencies would have time to comment on the proposals.

The Canadian Society of Environmental Biologists is comprised of 60 people in government, teaching and consulting practices engaged in environmental research in B.C.

Strategic Stockpile Unloaded

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon asked U.S. Congress today to permit him to sell $4.1 billion from the national stockpile of strategic materials no longer needed for security reasons, but vital in the fight against inflation.

He said the demand for industrial commodities has increased so that prices have gone up in some cases more than 30 per cent in the last year.

"These increases will eventually be felt in higher prices for the American consumer if we do not act decisively now," Nixon said.

"By disposing of unneeded items in the strategic stockpile we can strike a critical blow for the American consumer."

Nixon said he plans to take full advantage of the new stockpile surplus to stabilize prices in the metals marketing where prices for many commodities such as mercury, platinum, cadmium and silver have advanced more than 30 per cent during the last year and items such as copper, zinc and cobalt are up more than 20 per cent.

The present strategic stockpile of some 90 commodities, ranging from metals, minerals and rubber to industrial diamonds and iodine, was set up after the Second World War. The aim was to keep the country ready for a possible conflict.

It now totals $6.7 billion worth of material. Under the current law Nixon has the authority to sell about $1.9 billion from the stockpile.

POWER OUT IN SAANICH

A 4½-hour power failure troubled B.C. Hydro repairmen and residents of Saanich early this morning.

Wind and rain was blamed for a conductor burning through in Cedar Hill district, blacking out eight blocks north of the municipal boundary to Church Street.

Electricity went off at 1:40 a.m. and was restored at 5:57 today, Hydro said.

Chamber Greatly Alarmed By Government Decisions

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

British Columbia Chamber of Commerce president David Tait says he has become greatly alarmed by recent moves of the provincial government to assume more and more power over industry.

He said in an interview the provincial government is taking more control each week for no obvious reason.

"It appears they are laying the groundwork for a system of doctrinaire socialism, more extreme than any other NDP province in Canada."

Tait said the chamber has greatly revised its estimate of the NDP government since a generally friendly meeting with Premier Barrett in December.

At that time the premier said except for two fields it would be business as usual for the economic community for most of 1973.

The two exceptions were to be the government takeover of car insurance and an increase in corporation taxes which went to 12 per cent from 10 per cent.

"The premier assured us he did not intend to upset the applecart but would proceed slowly and carefully," Tait said.

"We were given to understand there would be no changes in the economic climate at least before summer except for the two areas, car insurance and corporation taxes."

However, the premier has talked caution but moved relentlessly against business, Tait said.

CREDIBILITY GAP

"As a result there is a great credibility gap and a deep underlying uncertainty about the future of business in British Columbia."

Tait predicted the premier will get a chilly reception from eastern financiers when he goes on a shopping trip in May to encourage investment in British Columbia.

"The premier's recent statements that business can expect no further surprises this year does nothing to allay the suspicions already aroused."

DICTATORIAL POWERS

Tait said that despite the premier's reassuring words, he is taking with him a record of offensive legislation and new dictatorial powers which are changing the economic climate of the province.

He said business had good reason to be alarmed by the growing powers adopted by the government, even if they are not intended to be exercised immediately.

"If a man goes into a store to buy a revolver, he obviously intends to use it some day," Tait said.

WAIT AND SEE

He said the chamber's first reaction after the December meeting had been to sit back and wait and see as the new government began to feel its way cautiously.

There was talk of some powers being needed to assure that workers were treated humanely, particularly in northern locations where economic dislocations sometimes resulted in families being callously laid off or forced to move.

The chamber was willing to go along with some of these reforms because they were looked upon as overdue, Tait said.

But the chamber's attitude towards the NDP government has changed as a result of legislation introduced at this session.

"Despite their talk about a free enterprise economy they are obviously laying the groundwork for socialism."

Cougar, Deer Movement Traced By Special Electronic Gear

NANAIMO (CP) — The British Columbia fish and wildlife branch is using special electronic equipment to monitor daily habits of cougar, elk and deer on Vancouver Island.

A number of the animals have been tagged with radio transmitters similar to emergency equipment carried in aircraft that enables searcr planes to track their location should a crash occur.

Government biologists, a veteran cougar hunter and his wife and post-graduate students are monitoring the devices.

"By learning more about the habits, range and food of these animals we will be able to conduct better management programs," said Ian Smith, regional biologist here.

Mr. Smith began the program in the fall by shooting two elk with a tranquilizer gun from a helicopter.

Before the end of the year, elk had been tagged in valleys of the Gold, White and Adams rivers.

"We are basically interested in finding out much more on the movements of these animals and their range preference," said Mr. Smith.

This is essential, he said, because loggers are moving into many areas inhabited by elk.

Cougar experiments are much more exciting, he said, but little is known yet because the trackers are more difficult to find than the animals.

Percy Dewar, a veteran Vancouver Island cougar hunter and his young wife, Penny, a graduate in marine biology at the University of Victoria, have been following an adult female since they shot it with a dart gun at Northwest Bay in January.

"At one time they got so close to the animal they could hear the cracking of the bones it was eating," said Mr. Smith.

"They are the most dedicated trackers we have. They left their home in Extension and are living in a camper van and an old garage about 10 miles south of Parksville near Englishman River."

They believe their cougar is about to have kittens which will add even more interest to their studies.

"We also want to get information on their food habits, how many deer they kill and what proportion of their diet consists of deer," said Mr. Smith.

Greg Jones of Vancouver, a graduate forestry student at the University of B.C., has been conducting the third project, in the Nimpkish Valley, a study of the winter range of deer since September, 1971, and tagged five deer in November.

Mr. Jones said the deer become even wilder after they are tagged, and has not been able to get within sighting distance of them.

He also uses a tracking plane and has found most of the deer stay within half a mile from the place they were tagged. Those tagged are spread over a four-by-three-mile area.

Mr. Jones said he hopes to finish his project this month, when two other UBC graduate students will take over.

PPWC Fails In Takeover Attempts

The Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada has been turned down by the B.C. Labor Relations Board in two attempts to take over bargaining rights from the United Paperworkers Internationl Union.

The independent Canadian union sought to represent employees of Cariboo Pulp and Paper at Quesnel and B.C. Forest Products at Mackenzie.

UPIU area vice-president E. P. O'Neil said today both applications were rejected because they were not made at the correct time as laid out in the Labor Relations Act.

Art Gallery Gets $5,100 From B.C.

The B.C. Cultural Fund has awarded a $5,100 grant to the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, the second grant to be announced during the past week for extension of gallery services to up-Island communities.

Gallery business administrator Allen Houghton said today the cultural fund grant will be used with a $21,300 grant by the Association of National Museums of Canada to take art exhibits and lectures on up-Island tours.

He said David Anderson, a Deep Cove art instructor, has been hired to head the expansion program.

Anderson, a former Victoria School of Art director, has been working informally with the gallery for more than a year setting up contacts and arranging the program which will include expansion of existing galleries, and the creation of display centres in medium-size towns.

Film presentations are also planned for the smaller communities, Houghton said, adding the next few months will be spent trying to determine the needs of the different communities.

Anderson, 50, of 10796 Deep Cove Rd., is a former art director for CHEK-TV and has taught art in night school classes in Victoria, Nanaimo, Port Alberni and Courtenay.

Won at International Expositions held throughout the world for over 40 years.

In 1846, John Dewar went into business for himself as a spirit merchant at 111 High Street, Perth, Scotland.

Special, because the single whiskies are not shocked by being dumped together at once. We let them rest quietly awhile, so that the blend will have greater uniformity and more dependable consistency.

In this Scottish city, on the banks of the River Tay, nothing much has changed. The castle is still there, and every year, from January to December, when the air is chill and pure and the water is cold, the people of Perth make Dewar's Scotch Whisky.

Son Tommy Dewar looked for new markets at the 1885 Brewer's Show and used a bagpipe to entertain. (The first commercial use of music?)

Sir Thomas Dewar became famous for such terse comments as, "Do right and fear no man; don't write and fear no woman".

All good reasons to remember...

Before you say Scotch, say Dewar's.

Moslems, Jews, RCs All Mark Holy Week Observances

By The Associated Press

The calendar today linked observances of three of the world's major faiths as Christians were in the second day of their pre-Easter Holy Week, Jews prepared to begin celebration of Passover at sundown and Moslems observed the anniversary of the birth of the Prophet Mohammed.

Roman Catholics carried olive branches and palms Sunday as they commemorated Christ's entry into Jerusalem five days before his crucifixion.

In Jerusalem, more than 5,000 pilgrims—including poor Arab villagers, high prelates in scarlet and monks in simple robes— retraced Christ's path into the Holy City in the sixth Palm Sunday under Israeli rule.

A busy highway and a mountainside stairway now cover the path Christ took. Boy Scouts kept back crowds of onlookers as the devout walked, singing in half a dozen languages, into the old walled city of Jerusalem.

Israeli police on horseback kept close watch on the pilgrimage, which passed without incident despite increased tension between Arbs and Jews in the Middle East.

Pope Paul celebrated mass before more than 15,000 persons who crowded into St. Peter's Basilica in Rome for the beginning of Holy week.

Millions more watched the two-hour service on television.

In a 15-minute homily, the Pope said the world's youth should look to Jesus Christ if they seek to transform society. "Contest and rebellion" are not ways to bring about change, he said.

The Pope blessed and distributed olive branches and palms—symbols of the branches spread before Christ on his entrance to Jerusalem—to scores of cardinals, prelates and youths.

The pontiff praised young people for their desire for peace and love but said reckless discipline goes contrary to Christ's teaching.

"In Christ is the way, the life, the peace, the love," said the Pope. "He is the key to our existence. His generosity is the model for all humanity."

The Jewish celebration of Passover lasts eight days and is expected to be extra joyful this year because Israel is celebrating its 25th anniversary as a nation.

LODGER CHARGED IN DEATHS

WORCESTER, England (AP) — David Anthony McGreavy was charged in court today with murdering a four-year-old boy and his two baby sisters whose mutilated bodies were found impaled on spiked railings.

McGreavy, 21, had been lodging at the home of the children's parents.

McGreavy made no plea and was granted legal aid. Magistrate ordered him held to await another preliminary hearing April 25.

Not Fancy, But Effective

CHICAGO (CP) — Chicago Black Hawks did a complete turnabout from Game 1 when they edged New York Rangers 5-4 Sunday to even the best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final at a game apiece.

The Rangers rallied from a 3-0 deficit to tie the contest early in the second period before the Hawks put the finishing touches to it with a power-play goal by Dennis Hull, his second one of the game, and Dick Redmond's fourth playoff counter that restored a two-goal Chicago lead.

"Not what you'd call playoff hockey," said Chicago Coach Billy Reay. "But an exciting game, eh?"

On the first, Chico Maki outmuscled Ron Harris for the puck in the corner and fed to Stapleton at the point who fired wide of the New York goal. But the puck caught Jean Ratelle's stick blade, banked off defenceman Jim Neilson and went in off the goal post.

The second was almost a duplicate, but this time the puck bolted over goaltender Eddie Giacomin's right shoulder off team-mate Dale Rolfe's skate.

Then Hull, who skated better in this game than he has in recent weeks, blistered one from the side of the net that caromed off Giacomin's glove hand, which was protecting his face, and dribbled over his shoulder into the net.

"You never want to come out," Giacomin said when asked his first reaction to being replaced by Gilles Villemure to open the second period.

"There was no explanation," he replied, when asked whether coach Emile Francis had approached him to find out how he was. "He just said that Gilles was going in.

"Now I know how a pitcher feels," Giacomin added, shaking his head with a smile.

"Sometimes a change can switch things around," Francis said of the change. Eddie's played some tough games this series.

The Rangers did get going at 18:54 of the first period on Rod Gilbert's first of two goals to narrow the Chicago margin. Jean Ratelle and Bill Fairbairn tied it.

"And we had them going until that guy (referee Wally Harris) called a tripping penalty on (Steve) Vickers," said Francis. "He was digging for the puck." Francis added of the incident in which Vickers upended Chicago's Bill White during a Ranger power play.

"They took advantage of the power play and went ahead again."

Francis credited both goaltenders, Villemure and Chicago's Tony Esposito, for their performances in the scoreless third period.

"Both clubs had good scoring opportunities, but Esposito had to be real sharp on (Bruce) MacGregor and Gilles kept us in there a few times, too."

Chicago defenceman Keith Magnuson, who broke his jaw in at least two spots when he stopped a shot by Rangers' Brad Park, is expected to be ready to play by at least the fifth game of the series, back here next Sunday.

The next two games of the series are scheduled for New York's Madison Square Garden Tuesday and Thursday with a 9:05 p.m. EST starting time necessitated by circus matinees at the Garden.

The big plus in the Chicago game, said Park, "was their forechecking."

"That had to change things around for them, plus they got a couple of 'picture play' scores in that first period," he added of the two Stapleton goals.

Mild Style Also Works For Flyers

MONTREAL (CP) — Philadelphia Flyers won the first battle, but the expected war hasn't materialized yet in their Stanley Cup semi-final series against Montreal Canadiens.

The Flyers defeated Montreal 5-4 in the opening game of the best-of-seven series Saturday night on an overtime goal by Rick MacLeish at 2:56.

Guy Lapointe with two, Jacques Lemaire and Yvan Cournoyer scored for Montreal, who play host to the Flyers here Tuesday night in the second game of the series.

Most people were expecting a rough contest, but not one fight erupted Saturday, although rookie Montreal defenceman Larry Robinson and Flyers' Dave Schultz made menacing gestures at each other in the first period.

Referee Bryan Lewis and his linesmen stepped in quickly and no penalties were called.

"The so-called experts thought it would be a rough game," said Flyers' captain Bobby Clarke, who received two of the eight minor penalties assessed by Lewis in the game.

"I don't really think there was that much hitting. We came off a pretty tough series against Minnesota. Each game was a tough one. The Minnesota series was more physical than this one tonight.

Frank's Pass Stopped by Puddle

Canadiens coach Scotty Bowman agreed the game was not rough but felt Lewis could have called a few more penalties.

Several times during the game, Bowman hopped on the Habs' players bench to scream at Lewis when he felt the referee had missed infractions against the Flyers.

Bowman refused to criticize left winger Frank Mahovlich for the play that led to the Flyers' game-winning goal.

"There's no way you are going to get me to say anything bad about Frank Mahovlich," Bowman said.

Mahovlich said he was trying to pass the puck to teammate Serge Savard, "but the puck got stuck in a puddle of water." MacLeish then picked it up and whipped a high drive behind Dryden.

No one was burying the Canadiens, despite the opening game loss, especially the Flyers.

"I'm not saying we've got them," said goaltender Doug Favell, who blocked 41 of 45 Montreal shots.

Clarke said that the first game victory "will mean nothing in the second game."

Meanwhile Canadiens' captain Henri Richard said Montreal was going to win the series "the hard way."

"It won't be the first time. I remember two years ago. We lost the first two games and then won four straight. We've been down before. It's been that way all the time."

Jets' 'Sub' Sinks Saints

Chris Bordeleau may be out with an injured ankle but veteran Bill Sutherland sent Minnesota Fighting Saints home limping Sunday night.

Sutherland proved to be the perfect replacement on Winnipeg Jets' top line with Bobby Hull and Norm Beaudin as the Jets hammered the Saints 8-5 to advance to the semi-finals of the World Hockey Association playoffs.

Sutherland, a journeyman forward for five National Hockey League teams over the last 10 years, scored two goals and assisted on four others as Winnipeg won the best-of-seven quarter-final 4-1.

New England Whalers, meanwhile, got a sudden-death overtime goal from Mike Byers Saturday night to oust Ottawa Nationals 5-4 and wrap up their quarter-final 4-1.

The Whalers will go against Cleveland Crusaders, who eliminated Philalelphia Blazers in four straight, in one semi-final starting Wednesday night in Boston.

The Jets, meanwhile will have to wait until Houston Aeros and Los Angeles Sharks are finished with each other.

The Aeros took a 3-2 lead in that series with a 6-3 win in a rugged game at Houston Sunday night.

Roy Hits Inside Track For Super-Stock Win

Traffic was more than a trifle hectic for front-running cars around the 27th lap of the super-stock main event Sunday, providing 2,350 spectators with their best thrills near the end of a racing program at Western Speedway.

Chris Van de Water led the 35-lap event for the first four circuits and Bob Collins took over for the next nine trips around the oval.

Rick O'Dell, who had previously won both the trophy dash and fast heat, took over on the 14th lap and was still ahead on the 27th.

Terry Forsyth moved up at this point and drew level with O'Dell going down the grandstand stretch and into the number-one turn. Roy Haslam was right behind and passed both O'Dell and Forsyth on the inside when the leading duo went wide in the turn.

In the meantime, all three cars were in the process of lapping a slower vehicle driven by Rod Caddell. Things got a little tight in the corner and, amidst some fender rubbing, Forsyth's car spun off the track and out of contention.

Haslam, still closely pressed by O'Dell, went on to take the checkered flag by half a car length.

Collins, who led the fast heat for nine of the 10 laps before slipping to third place, finished behind O'Dell.

Gary Kershaw, who has been campaigning on the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing (NASCAR) circuit during the past few seasons, turned out to drive a newly-built 1969 Chevelle super-stock owned by Gerry Cairns and assembled by Dave and Harvey Chipper.

Mechanical difficulties plagued Kershaw most of the night and the car blew a radiator hose on the 20th lap of the main while running fifth.

Kershaw, who is still looking for a sponsor for his NASCAR vehicle, doesn't expect to race much at Western this year. Cairns will probably be the regular driver of the new car.

Joe Musfelt, who finished first in the fast heat and third in the trophy dash, won the claimer main.

Perry's 'Big Dipper' Frustrating to Hitter

By The Associated Press

It happens every spring—somebody notices Gaylord Perry's "Big Dipper". But nobody hits it.

"If he was throwing legitimate fast balls, we'd be hitting them," said Detroit Tigers manager Billy Martin after Perry pitched Cleveland Indians to a 7-0 victory Sunday with a two-hitter.

Martin was referring to Perry's alleged spit ball—the one that droops like a sinker and dances like a berserk curve ball.

"It's so frustrating to sit on the bench and watch hitters like ours missing balls by that much," said Martin, holding his hands more than a foot apart. "He makes our good hitters look like mediocre hitters."

And what does Perry have to say about all this fuss? He denies malpractice, of course.

"They still don't know I've got a fork ball, do they?" said Perry, pointing out that a fork ball has some movement, too.

In Sunday's other American League games, New York Yankees defeated Boston Red Sox 6-2; Kansas City Royals trounced Chicago White Sox 12-5 and Milwaukee Brewers nipped Baltimore Orioles 3-2 in 11 innings of the first game of a doubleheader before losing the second, 5-4. Rain washed out a doubleheader between California Angels and Texas Rangers and also postponed the Oakland A's Minnesota Twins game.

In the National, Hank Aaron's 676 career wasn't enough to help Atlanta as the Braves bowed 6-2 to Los Angeles Dodgers; Pittsburgh Pirates belted Montreal Expos 8-3; New York Mets edged Philadelphia Phillies 2-1; Chicago Cubs beat St. Louis Cardinals 8-6; San Diego Padres swept a doubleheader from Houston Astros, winning the first game 5-1 and taking the second 4-0, and Cincinnati Reds swept a pair with San Francisco Giants, romping 11-0 in the first game and winning the second 7-3.

Perry was in top form Sunday, allowing only an infield hit by Mickey Stanley and a single to right by Dick McAuliffe. If he put anything on the ball, though, nobody noticed.

"He didn't throw any grease balls to me," said Detroit's Bill Freehan, who was hit by a Perry pitch and caught the ball for a quick inspection. "He might have thrown one or two to somebody else, though."

The way Perry was pitching, he didn't need much support— but he got it anyway as Charlie Spikes hit a three-run homer and Walt Williams doubled in two more runs.

Mel Stottlemyre pitched a four-hitter and Horance Clark's two-run single keyed a six-run outburst in the fourth inning as the Yankees celebrated their 50th anniversary at Yankee Stadium with a victory over the Red Sox.

A crowd of 35,700, attending the festive occasion, watched Stottlemyre pitch no-hit ball for four innings and control the tempo of the game all the way. He got ample support in that fourth inning, when the Yanks sewed up the game off Boston starter John Curtis.

Bulls Can't Beat Law of Averages

By The Associated Press

Chicago Bulls took on Los Angeles Lakers and the law of averages and the Bulls came up losers for another season.

Going into Sunday night's game against the Lakers, the Bulls had two streaks going. They had never won a National Basketball Association playoff game on the road and hadn't won at the Los Angeles Forum since October 22, 1971. Unfortunately for Chicago, both streaks remained intact as Los Angeles edged the Bulls 95-92.

"A loss like this is just like a year's work down the drain," he said. "I thought we had the game won even with 20 seconds to go cause all we had to do was get one good shot."

But when it came down to the one good shot, it was the Lakers' Gail Goodrich who took it, giving the Lakers a 93-92 lead with 28 seconds remaining.

Bombers Stay Alive

Times News Services

Flin Flon Bombers prolonged one Western Canada Junior Hockey League semi-final series Sunday while Medicine Hat Tigers finally got "on the scoreboard" in another.

Powered by the two-goal performances of Wayne Bianchin and Blaine Stoughton, the Bombers out-roughed Saskatoon Blades 8-5 at Flin-Flon. Saskatoon leads the best-of-seven playoff 3-1 with the fifth game scheduled Tuesday in Saskatoon.

At Medicine Hat, the Tigers finally cracked a hole in goaltending that helped Edmonton win the first two games by running up a 6-1 victory before 4,210 fans. Edmonton leads 2-1 with the fourth game scheduled Tuesday at Medicine Hat.

Bombers, trailing 2-0 in the first period, banged in four goals in less than five minutes, including three on power-play situations, and never looked back.

It was a rough affair with referee Joe Cassidy of Calgary dishing out 34 penalties, including 10 majors.

The high-scoring Tigers peppered 40 shots at Oil Kings' Doug Soetaert while Medicine Hat's Jerry Thomas was tested only 23 times.

EDMONTON (1) — Mike Will; MEDICINE HAT (6) — Tom Lysiak 2, Ed Johnstone, Jim McCrimmon, Boyd Anderson, Ken Gassoff. Attendance: 4,210. (Edmonton leads best-of-seven semi-final 2-1).

Fourth game will be played here tonight.

Soviets Finish World Tourney With Perfect Record

The powerful Soviet Union made it an impressive 10 victories in a row Sunday by beating second-place Sweden 6-4 to sweep the world amateur hockey championships in Moscow.

The Russians, who lost an eight-game series to Team Canada last fall and the amateur title to Czechoslovakia last year, became the first country to score 20 points since the current format of six teams was started in 1969.

In another game Sunday, the third-place Czechs humbled fourth-place Finland 8-0 with three goals in the first period and five in the third.

On Saturday fifth-place Poland defeated West Germany 4-1 to relegate the losers to Group B next year. They will be replaced by East Germany which won the Group B tournament earlier this year.

Although Sunday's game was meaningless, the Swedes found themselves in a 3-3 tie in the second period as a shaky Vladislav Tretyak in the Russian goal gave them scoring chances by handling several shots poorly.

But Alexander Maltsev scored his second goal of the game to give the Russians a 4-3 edge and Vladimir Petrov and Boris Mikhailov extended the margin to 6-3 in the final period.

Petrov scored 18 of the Soviet Union's 100 goals and added 16 assists to win the individual scoring race which was dominated by the Russians who took the first five places.

MICKEY GETS 82ND WIN WITH LAST-HOLE BIRDIE

MICKEY WRIGHT
. . . ends victory famine

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Mickey Wright sank a 25-foot downhill putt for a birdie on the last hole, breaking a three-year victory drought with a two-stroke triumph Sunday in the $154,000 Colgate-Dinah Shore Winner's Circle golf tournament

Miss Wright, winning her 82nd championship in 16 years as a professional, stroked in her winning putt after Joyce Kazmierski bogeyed away a two-shot lead with five holes to play.

Mickey, a tall blonde who was inducted into the Ladies' Professional Golf Association Hall of Fame in 1964, fired a four-under-par 68 to earn the $25,000 first prize in the women's richest tournament. Her 72-hole total was 284, four strokes under par.

Miss Kazmierski, a six-year pro who hasn't won a tournament, finished second for the second time this year. She bogeyed the 18th, 16th and 15th holes to fritter away a four-shot lead starting the final round.

Her 75 on the Mission Hills Golf and Country Club course gave her a total of 286, two shots better than Betty Burfeindt and Carol Mann.

The triumph increased Miss Wright's career earnings to $316,000.

Two Canadians also had paydays as Sandra Post Elliot of Oakville, Ont., finished in a tie for seventh and collected $4,000 while Jocelyne Bourassa of Shawinigan, Que., won $1,025.

Mrs. Elliot fired a 73 Sunday after a 69 Saturday to finish at 291 while Miss Bourassa carded a 75 Sunday and a 74 Saturday for a 72-hole total of 302.

Thompson Topples Kent; Wakeham Wins on 22nd

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Life may begin at 40 for some, but Bill Thompson never got rolling until he was 55.

The Victoria Golf Club member waited until he opened the calendar on senior eligibility before he started recording his most notable achievements on the fairways.

He's still at it. The five-handicapper from Oak Bay created the big stir Sunday in the CFAX Vancouver Island Open by eliminating medallist Ricky Kent 3 and 2 at Gorge Vale.

A late starter in golf ("I didn't get started until I was 40") and now one of Oak Bay's most active players, Thompson recorded his biggest success in 1970 by winning the Pacific Northwest Seniors' Association championship. That was his first year as a senior.

He repeated as the PNWSA champ in 1972 and now is having a serious look at the Island Open title.

His victory Sunday and Bill Wakeham's overtime squeaker to get past Glen Meadows professional Dick Silverberg highlighted the opening round of match play in the 23rd Island tournament.

Wakeham, the three-time champion from Cowichan, had to go four extra holes before defeating the stubborn Silverberg.

Kent's departure was the big shock. The 26-year-old Glen Meadows amateur fell two holes in arrears to Thompson's birdie-par start and never got a chance to recover with the Oak Bay veteran playing par golf.

Thompson, happiest with his strong iron play, was one up after nine holes, went two up on the 12th, swapped victories on the next two holes and then went three up with a par on the 15th.

Some early putting difficulties by Silverberg and a spectacular recovery by Wakeham on the second extra hole prevented the Glen Meadows pro from eliminating his favored rival.

Both experienced putting problems during the regulation 18 holes, but Silverberg's chances were hurt most by a pair of short missed putts on the eighth and 15th holes. One down after seven, Silverberg missed a chance for a win on the eigth, he missed a putt of less than 18 inches. Then, on the 15th and with the match square, Silverberg missed another possible win when he missed an 18-inch putt.

The Glen Meadows pro had Wakeham on the hook again on the second extra hole. Silverberg put his tee shot on the par-three hole to within 12 feet of the cup while Wakeham's wound up in a trap. Wakeham exploded to within seven feet, then sank the putt for a big half.

On the 22nd, both matched booming drives down the centre of the fairway. Silverberg's approach shot pulled up short of the green, however, while Wakeham was pin high but abut a foot off the green. Silverberg's chip rolled about seven feet past while Wakeham rolled his third to within 10 inches. Silverberg missed his bid for a par and conceded Wakeham the short putt and the match.

In addition to Wakeham and Thompson, others moving to next Sunday's second round at Oak Bay were Grant Milliken, professional Earl Davies and Al MacLeod, all of Gorge Vale; Marty Richards and 65-year-old Al Zimmerman of Glen Meadows; Ed Charles and Bruce Pelmore of Colwood; Ted Pollard, Mike Gray and Bob Hunt, all of Uplands; Greg Barnes of Cedar Hill; Cec Ferguson of Gregarah; Frank Bayuk of Mt. Brenton, and Oak Bay's Jack Wintemute.

Milliken, a youthful Gorge Vale member, came up with the day's best round in eliminating Uplands assistant Don Billsborough 3 and 2. Milliken was four under after 14 holes and wound up three under par when his match ended on the 16th.

Beard Backs Off Best

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — It was a tight finish on the pro golf tour, but happy Homero Blancas wasn't at all ashamed of it.

"I'll take a one-stroke victory every time," Blancas said in gasping relief after he and Frank Beard took turns backing off in the final round of the $150,000 Monsanto Open golf tournament Sunday.

Blancas backed off just a little less. He bogeyed two of his last three holes. But Beard bogeyed three of his last five and Homero pulled down the $30,000 first prize with a fat, four-over-par 75 in the final round.

He scored his fifth victory in 10 years on the pro tour with a 277 total, seven-under-par on the cool and windswept, 6,679-yard Pensacola Country Club course.

Beard, who made up a four-stroke deficit over the first 10 holes, blew it with bogeys on his last two holes. He finished with a 72 for 278—his best in more than two years.

"I'm a nervous wreck," Blancas said as he headed for the Tournament of Champions in La Costa, Calif., this week. It's his third consecutive trip to that event for winners of regular tour events for the last 12 months.

He gained his entry when the steady Beard missed a par-saving 10-foot putt on the final hole that could have tied it up and sent the tournament into a sudden death playoff.

Andy North, a lanky tour rookie, was third at 279 after a final 72, two strokes back of Blancas.

Dave Hill, the 1972 winner, veteran Miller Barber and New Zealand lefty Bob Charles were next at 281. Hill had a 69, Barber 71 and Charles 75.

Blancas had a four-stroke advantage when play started but promptly bogeyed his first two holes.

Beard scrambled, but managed to match par figures over the front nine and turned just two behind. He made those up on the 10th. Blancas bogeyed, missing the green, and Beard birdied to put them all even.

The close friends and sometimes room-mates matched strokes over the next three holes—then seemed to take turns trying to give it away.

Castaways Win Finale

Centre Craig Dalziel raced over for two trys Sunday to help Castaways down University of Victoria Norsemen 22-8 at Gordon Head in the last Victoria Rugby Union first division league match of the season.

Second-place Castaways, who finished four points behind James Bay Athletics Association, also got trys from Murray McAlpine and Rob Hindson. Alan Rees kicked two conversions and Mike Walsh booted one.

Chris Daniels and Bill Walker scored tries for Norsemen, who led 8-6 at half time.

First and second division playoff semi-finals will be held next weekend.

In Sunday's only other match, an exhibition clash at Windsor Park, Oak Bay Wanderers, with trys by Don Luney Gary Hoskins, Mike Penn and Ron Caton and three conversions by veteran Don Burgess, downed visiting Willamette University 22-10.

Castaways defeated the Oregon team 20-14 Saturday.

Lloyd Anderson scored two trys Saturday as Wanderers finished off their first division schedule with a 14-9 win over UVic Vikings.

Saanich Velox, led by Dan Wallis with a try, penalty goal and a conversion, crushed Nanaimo 26-6 at Lambrick Park Saturday to sweep past the Hub City club and finish second in the second division.

Oak Bay Shocks Vikings In Extra-Time Thriller

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

"Fahtastic!"

That was just about all coach Ron Jenkins could say after his underdog Oak Bay squad had snatched a thrilling 4-3 overtime victory over the University of Victoria Vikings.

And that pretty well described Sunday's playoff final in the Vancouver Island Soccer League.

There were plenty of other attractions — Stanley Cup hockey on the tube and Province Cup soccer just across the road at Central Park among them — but the 137 fans at Royal Athletic Park were rewarded with some of the best, and certainly some of the most exciting, soccer of the season.

Former Trinidad international Trini Douglas, a winger with one of the hardest shots in B.C., slammed in his second goal of the game in injury time to enable Oak Bay to pull level at 3-3.

Then, after 30 nail-biting minutes of overtime had produced no more goals, it was in the dying seconds of injury time again that substitute John Garvey pounced on a pass from Bob Mackie and hammered it into the net.

And so the Bays, who could finish no better than third in the league but who stunned Cosmopolitan Royals a week ago in the semi-finals, were the champions — and deservedly so.

With the steadiness of players like Kevin Costain, John Gage and John McFarland on defence and the flare of Douglas and John Hughes in the forwards, Oak Bay looked the better-balanced team.

Vikings, coached by former Welsh international Brian Hughes, took the league title on goal average after finishing in a first-place tie with Royals.

They looked like adding the playoff crown, too, when they fought back brilliantly from a 0-2 deficit with three straight goals by Jim Marshall, Ross Woodland and Peter Mason.

But Vikings' youthful zest and inexperience let them down in those last seconds of regular time and again in overtime when they failed to muster poise and control the ball.

Bays' greater experience showed up early in the first half when, although outplayed territorially by the hustling Vikings, they capitalized on errors to grab the lead on goals by Bill Hamilton, on a penalty, and a booming 35-yard shot by Douglas following a free kick.

All round, it was a game to remember. So fast was the play and so numerous were the shots on goal that both goalkeepers, Dave Achurch for UVic and Jack Kuyvenhoven for Oak Bay, were brilliant, despite the high score.

BOXERS WIN TITLE

London Boxing Club added the playoff title to its league crown by edging Victoria West 1-0 in the Victoria and District League's first division final at Heywood Avenue Park.

Left-winger Jerry Lister moved in at just the right moment to slam the ball home from a corner for the game's only goal 25 minutes into the first half.

Saanich Braves won the second division playoff final 4-2 on a series of penalty kicks after a scoreless game and two scoreless overtime periods.

Frank Morris scored three goals to lead Longhorns to a 5-1 win over Royal Roads in the third division final. John Ooms and Len Hayes were the other scorers for the winners. Reinold Zimmer got the goal for Royal Roads.

ISLANDERS FAIL TO REACH FINALS

For the first time since 1960, there will be no Vancouver Island representatives in the provincial juvenile soccer championship tournament.

All four Vancouver Island squads that had survived earlier rounds of elimination competition, along with a Salt Spring Island club, were ousted from the 21st annual B.C., tournament during semi-final battles over the weekend.

In Sunday struggles on the Mainland, Richmond's Cliff Avenue United topped Victoria Boys' Club 2-0 in a first division semi and Westminster Blue Mountain Cewes advanced to the second division final with a 3-0 decision over Victoria Lakehill Kiwanis.

Westminster-Abbotsford Legion tripped North Shore Legion 118 6-1 Sunday to win the other first division berth.

On Saturday, Alberni Poulson and Prescott dropped a 3-1 sixth division decision to Vancouver South Slope Tejas in Vancouver, Burnaby Cliff Avenue United nipped Victoria Gorge 2-0 at Topaz Park and Vancouver Dunbar Stongs whipped Salt Spring Island 7-1, at Salt Spring Island School.

Elsewhere Saturday, Cliff Avenue United and Vancouver Grandview Legion won fourth division semis, Vancouver Dunbar Stongs and Delta Cablevision moved on to the fifth division final and North Shore Burdett Beavers earned the other sixth division berth.

Finals in all divisions are incorporated into the annual "Tournament of Champions" at Kinsmen Stadium in North Vancouver, April 28-29.

Six Island Juniors On B.C. Swim Team

Vancouver Island will be represented by six junior swimmers in the annual dual B.C.-Alberta swim meet May 19-21 in Edmonton.

The six were among 32 swimmers aged 14 or under picked during trials Saturday at Crystal Pool.

Patty Gilker and Alison Noble of Victoria Flying "Y", Ellen Raap and David Davis of Victoria Olympians and Elaine Fink and Gordon Gray of Port Alberni Aquatic Club were selected during the one-day trials that drew approximately 200 competitors.

Miss Raap was the only double winner from the Island. She placed first in the 100-metre freestyle and 200-metre individual medley events and came second in the 50-metre butterfly for 10-and-under splashers.

Miss Noble collected a victory in the 100-metre backstroke and was third in the 100-metre freestyle for 11 and 12-year-olds.

Miss Gilker won the 10-and-under 100-metre backstroke event and Davis placed first in the boys' 100-metre breaststroke in the same age class.

Miss Fink won the 100-metre freestyle and finished fourth in the 100-metre butterfly for 11 and 12-year-olds while Gray emerged as runner-up in two 11 and 12-year-old events — the 100-metre backstroke and 200-metre individual medley — and placed third in the 100-metre freestyle.

Another 10 seniors will be selected to the provincial squad following Victoria invitational meets, May 4-6.

BILLS SIGN TACKLE

BUFFALO (AP) — Buffalo Bills of the National Football League have announced that defensive tackle John Le Heup of South Carolina returned a signed contract.

Danny a Dandy

Speedy inside-right Dan Henry was a one-man scoring machine for Victoria Gorge Molsons soccer team on the weekend.

Henry, who scored all the goals in North Vancouver Saturday when Gorge grabbed a 3-0 Pacific Coast Soccer League victory over Paul's Canadians, got the only goal Sunday to lead Molsons to a 1-0 win over St. Andrews of Vancouver in a third-round Province Cup match.

The fast, young Mainland League team provided Gorge with unexpectedly tough opposition in the match at Central Park and Victoria goalkeeper Graham Lee was called on to make several fine saves for the shutout.

Gorge began to get the upper hand midway through the second half but hit posts and crossbar three times and came close with several other shots before Henry beat three defenders to score on a fine solo effort at the 25-minute mark.

The Victoria team meets Sliammon Braves in Powell River in the fourth round.

Molsons' Coast League win Saturday, coupled with West-United's 2-1 victory over University of British Columbia Thunderbirds, lifted Gorge into a third-place tie with UBC — but it was only temporary.

Thunderbirds ended their league schedule Sunday by edging North Shore United 4-3 in North Vancouver to move out of the tie with Gorge. Molsons have only an interlocking game with Burnaby Norburns of the Inter-City League remaining.

Pirates Pound Pipers

Pirates upset league-champion Sandpipers I 3-0 Saturday to capture the first division Vancouver Island Women's Field Hockey Association playoff title at the University of Victoria.

In an earlier match on the same pitch, Evergseens collected the second division playoff crown by blanking UVic Vagabonds, 3-0.

Goalie Marian Mallory recorded the shutout.

Karen Morrison scored twice and Jan Crook added a single goal for Evergreens as Vagabonds were unable to capitalize on several breakaways and left Jan Dallin with the shutout.

Mrs. John, playing-coach of the Canadian national team this season, was presented with the Hibbert Trophy as the outstanding player during the awards banquet and annual general meeting Saturday night.

Helen Bunyan received the Christine Trophy for service to the association, sportsmanship and ability.

FIVE-NATIONS CROWN SHARED BY ALL TEAMS

DUBLIN (AP) — Ireland defeated France 6-4 Saturday in the Five Nations Rugby Union tournament, which ended in an unprecedented five-way tie.

France needed a draw to win the title, but in the waning minutes, Jean Pierre Romeu missed a fairly easy conversion that spoiled the bid.

The five nations — England, Scotland, Wales, Ireland and France — all finished the tournament with four points on two wins and two defeats each.

Ireland led 3-0 at the half and went on to lead 6-0 before France scored. Romeu, who had kicked 26 points for France in three previous games, missed the conversion from a slight angle.

The championship first was played in 1893.

Nanaimo Athlete Wins Top Award

VANCOUVER (CP) — Phil Olson of Woodlands Junior Secondary, Nanaimo, was named outstanding high school athlete at the 25th annual Vancouver Relays, Saturday, for adding more than 20 feet to the relays' javelin record.

Olson hurled the javelin 190 feet, nine inches, easily topping the old mark of 166 feet, seven-eighths inch. The record throw earned him the Ulysses Trophy. Larry McKinney of centennial secondary, Coquitlam, was second at 170 feet, six inches.

Burnaby Central took first place in the team standings with 95 points. Kitsilano Secondary was second at 58 and point grey secondary was third with 53½.

In the boys' 100 metres, Gordon U'Ren of Burnaby South was first in 11.4, Dudley Horner of Killarney was second and Bruce Vye of Mt. Douglas, Victoria, was third.

Hockey Visit

Officials of the Vancouver Island Men's Field Hockey Association have announced that a touring Southern California Rep team will play an Island selection in an exhibition game at 5 p.m. Thursday at the University of Victoria.

The Californians will take part in a three-day tournament in Vancouver next weekend.

Two Records In Two Days

EAST BERLIN (Reuter) — Kornelia Ender of East Germany set her second world swimming record in as many days with a time of one minute, 3.5 seconds in the 100-metre butterfly Saturday during a dual meet with the Soviet Union.

The 14-year-old had a world mark of 2:23.1 for the 200-metre individual medley Friday and sliced .29 seconds from the former butterfly record held by Mayumi Aoki of Japan.

Surrey Kicker Settles Provincial Rugby Title

Gary Metz proved to be just the right young man for the job as kicking skill decided the provincial high school rugby championship.

Metz provided all the points for his club at Royal Athletic Park Saturday night as he sparked Princess Margaret of Surrey to a 6-3 triumph over Langley in the tournament final, decided on penalty kicks after two scoreless overtime periods.

In the title-decjding match of the two-day tournament, it was 3-3 at the end of regulation time after penalty goals booted by Metz and Langley's Ed Bright.

When the overtime sessions failed to crack the deadlock, officials elected to settle the issue with penalty kicks from the 25-yard line. Bright missed on his first attempt and Metz nailed down the crown for Surrey by lofting the ball between the posts.

Princess Margaret reached the final by upsetting favored Claremont Spartans, the Victoria high school league and playoff champions, 10-0 in the semi-final round earlier Saturday. Langley breezed through its semi-final with a 30-3 win over Oak Bay Bays.

IT'S A LOGICAL JOB

LONDON (UPI) — The Privy Council, which normally handles the affairs of the British crown, has been assigned an extra task by 10-year-old Paul Gregory and other schoolboys in Cheshire.

They wrote the council in care of No. 10 Downing St., the official residence of prime ministers, complaining that their school needed a new "privy" and that the Privy Council was obviously the agency to take care of it.

11-Day Ordeal Ends

NAIROBI — Canadian teacher Karl Swinimer, who went without food for 11 days in freezing temperatures on Kenya's Mount Kilimanjaro, was rescued Sunday.

Swinimer was with a Canadian party which was descending the mountain early this month when he became lost. A massive rescue operation was mounted. Swinimer, a tutor at a secondary school at Moshi in northeastern Tanzania, was spotted early Sunday on a mountain ledge by Andrew Neal, operations manager for a Nairobi-based firm of helicopter operators.

CHAPLIN
. . . 84 today

NICE, France — Charles Chaplin celebrated his 84th birthday with his family today, going out for lunch at a Riviera restaurant and opening messages of good wishes from his friends.

LONDON — The British admiralty said Sunday night a Swedish freighter was aground on a Caribbean reef and Prince Charles was aboard a survey ship trying to save it from breaking up. Prince Charles, 24-year-old heir to the throne, is a sub-lieutenant serving as assistant navigating officer on the Royal Navy survey ship Fox.

The freighter was identified as the 35,550-ton Ariadne, registered in Goteborg. The admiralty said it was aground near the island of Antigua in the West Indies.

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. — John Roger Orr, 81, a Scotsman in a wheelchair who helped find billets for thousands of Canadian servicemen on leave in Scotland during the Second World War, died Saturday at his home in Peterborough. Orr, a widely-known lawyer confined to a wheelchair by an attack of polio when he was 15, was in charge of billeting and leaves for Commonwealth troops in Scotland.

LONDON — Bill Chapman, Britain's oldest man, died today at the age of 110. He was found this morning stretched out on the bed in his flat in Southend, Essex, where he lived alone.

TEL AVIV — Rabbi Meir Kahane, a one-time New York militant and leader of the Jewish Defence League, punched a visiting Soviet Communist youth official in the face today to protest restrictions on Jewish emigration from the Soviet Union. The attack occurred at a news conference sponsored by a new Communist party, Rakah, for Eastern European delegates to its youth convention. Witnesses said Kahane walked in wearing a black long-haired wig and carrying a tape recorder and said he represented a Jewish weekly newspaper in New York. Midway through the news conference, they said, Kahane stood up and poured a glass of soft drink over the head of the visiting Soviet official, Yuri Pilin, and struck him on the chin.

MINEOLA, N.Y. — Alan King had his 18-year-old son Andrew arrested Saturday night for doing something the comedian didn't think funny — taking one of the family cars without permission. The boy spent the night in a detention pen at Nassau County police headquarters and was arraigned Sunday, not only on the unauthorized use of the auto charge but also for felonious possession of drugs.

NEW YORK — A son and daughter of Pablo Picasso living in La Jolla, Calif., are preparing to challenge the artist's widow in the French courts for a share of his multimillion-dollar estate.

Picasso died a week ago at his villa in Mougins on the French Riviera at the age of 91, leaving no will. Claude Picasso, 24, and Paloma Ruiz Picasso, 23, Picasso's children by his former mistress Francoise Gilot, would be joined in the action by a half-sister, Mrs. Pierre Widmaier, 38, of Marseilles, who was born to Picasso and Marie Therese Walter, an earlier mistress.

LOS ANGELES — Anthony Kohl started his car with ease Saturday, but it seemed that nothing went right after that. Police said Kohl tried to back his car out of apartment house parking lot and struck four parked cars, tore off the garage door and rammed his car nearly 30 feet into the apartment itself. The 51-year-old driver was booked on suspicion of drunken driving.

GRAVESEND, England — Mrs. Fay Young has decided to put her 14-year-old daughter Janet on World War II rations for one week to prove to her that kids have it too easy today. The girl's menu for the next seven days will consist of 14 ounces of meat, three eggs, two pounds of potatoes and two ounces of cheese plus unrationed items. For Sunday lunch, this meant a slice of bread and a boiled egg.

MASS TRIAL

ISTANBUL (Reuter) — Turkey's biggest mass trial in the current drive against political extremists was to begin today when 256 persons appeared before a military court here.

It will be Turkey's largest mass trial since the military coup two years ago and the prosecution has indicated it will seek the death penalty for eight of the defendants — all alleged members or supporters of the underground Turkish People's Liberation Army (TPLA).

Guney is accused of aiding and abetting left-wing guerrillas and could be sentenced to up to 15 years imprisonment.

The TPLA has been responsible for numerous guerrilla attacks, including two aircraft hijackings, the kidnapping and murder of Israeli Consul-General Ephraim Elrom and attempted assassinations.

The 559-page indictment lists crimes committed between 1969 and 1972 — including kidnapping and murder, three armed robberies, organizing the escape of guerrillas from a military prison and the killing of a taxi driver.

Grape Boycott Looms

INDIO, Calif. (AP) — Farm labor organizer Cesar Chavez says he plans a mass exodus from the fields and a renewed table grape boycott after an announcement that contracts won with growers in the Coachella Valley have been lost to the Teamsters Union.

Chavez's United Farm Workers Union (AFL-CIO) won the first farm labor contracts with grape growers in U.S. history in 1970 following a two-year boycott, strikes and some violence in the fields.

A Teamsters spokesman announced Sunday that his union has signed field worker contracts with 85 per cent of the table grape growers in this fertile southeastern California area, providing for an immediate pay increase to $2.30 an hour from $2.

Two major growers, said they renewed contracts with UFWU early Sunday, but a union spokesman said no final agreements have been reached. The UFWU's contract with the valley's 15 table grape producers expired at midnight Saturday night after several weeks of negotiations. The union has been asking an initial raise to $2.70, the maximum provided in the Teamsters' four-year pact.

The valley produces about three million boxes of California's annual table grape harvest of 25 million boxes. From May through July, the region produces about 80 per cent of the U.S. domestic grape supply.

Ralph L. Cotner of the Western Conference of Teamsters threw a stack of petitions onto a table at a news conference Sunday. He contended they contained signatures from 4,000 of the 5,000 farm workers employed seasonally in the valley, supporting the Teamsters.

Nixon Plans Fall Trip To Europe

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon plans a fall visit to major NATO countries in Europe for discussions on trade, military aid and troop levels.

Nixon told reporters Sunday he is preparing for the autumn tour. Deputy press secretary Gerald Warren said later that the president plans to visit Britain, France, Italy and West Germany, all of whose leaders will have visited the United States by fall.

The U.S. president said President Georges Pompidou of France will visit the United States, but not necessarily Washington, for conferences before autumn.

Prime Minister Edward Heath of Britain came to the United States in early February for talks with Nixon. Premier Guilio Andreotti of Italy is due Tuesday and Chancellor Willy Brandt of West Germany May 1.

As he began his second term, Nixon called 1973 "the year of Europe" and indicated that he will devote more attention to soothing some European frustrations with recent U.S. economic and military policies.

Energy Act Given Slow Passage

The British Columbia legislature gave section-by-section approval Saturday to the controversial Energy Act despite opposition pleas that it granted excessive powers to the proposed energy commission.

The 194-section bill was given third reading at a special Saturday sitting of the legislature after more than four hours of debate which saw the legislation amended frequently either by the government or by government-accepted opposition amendments.

On many of the contentious sections the Social Credit, Liberal and Conservative parties hammered away at the government for the "wide-ranging" and "dictatorial" powers in the legislation.

NEW COMMISSION

Industrial Development Minister Alex Macdonald answered most of these charges by stating that many of the regulatory powers were contained in the act setting up the three-man B.C. Public Utilities Commission which will be replaced by the energy commission.

The legislation gives the commission the power to regulate the prices of petroleum products and to manage the province's energy resources.

One of the lengthier disputes arose over the powers given to the commission to regulate the wholesale or retail price of the petroleum products.

Macdonald made it clear that the government was interested in equalizing the price of gasoline across the province and said any vote against these powers was against cheaper gas in places like northern B.C.

He mentioned the Pacific Petroleum refinery at Taylor in northern B.C. which he said is "exploiting the people of the north" by charging exorbitant rates for its gas. This despite the fact the company is making a profit of nearly $30 million a year, he said.

He told the Social Credit members from that region that they were being discriminated against on gasoline prices and added "if you don't vote for this section you are not supporting the people of the north."

Ed Smith (SC — North Peace River) said gasoline retailers in northern B.C. or anywhere in the province should be able to set their own rates. In the north, he said, the retailer would be able to charge higher rates for the gasoline because it costs them more to operate their gasoline businesses.

Smith said a recent legislative committee study of gasoline prices showed there is a difference in the wholesale price of gasoline across the province of only about two cents a gallon.

Macdonald said the government was not so much concerned with the retail price but the wholesale price at the refinery.

"This is the social evil."

Don Phillips (SC — South Peace River) said if the government did equalize the gas prices it would force people on the lower mainland to subsidize a lowering of the gas prices in the north. This would be unfair to Macdonald's own constituents in Vancouver East, Phillips said.

Premier Dave Barrett said that when he toured the northern part of the province during last year's election campaign he told the people of the area his party would do everything it could to give the people of the north equal opportunity for the same gas prices as those in the southern part of the province.

POLITICAL CHARGES

Liberal leader David Anderson said he was "horrified" to learn that the premier was attempting to fix gas prices for "political reasons."

Barrett said the government is making many of its changes in the social and economic field for political reasons.

"We are in politics for political reasons and we are fighting for the little man with this legislation."

The section granting the commission power to fix gas prices passed by a vote of 29 to 12 with all opposition parties voting against the government.

On another section, Macdonald said the commission would have the power to control what it considered wasteful practices that increase the price of petroleum. He mentioned false and misleading advertising as an example.

Stonehenge Air Show

Stonehenge, the ancient Druid landmark located in Salisbury, England, is the scene of an air show by the British Army's Blue Eagles display team during the weekend. Here the team performs a "bomb burst" or "Spread Eagle," using Sioux helicopters.

FILLING, DRILLING LIKELY TO FADE

TORONTO (CP)— A Chicago dentist predicted on the weekend that dentistry as it is known today — drilling, filling and pulling teeth — likely almost will disappear in the next century.

Dr. Charles Ameta, co-founder of the American Society for Preventive Dentistry, said that by the next century "some bright scientist is going to come along with something that will beat plaque" — the coating of bacteria that rots teeth.

Dr. Amenta said that until this discovery is made, dentists should concentrate on prevention rather than trying to pick up after failure.

Pattison Wants Scallen Stock

VANCOUVER (CP) — Millionaire industrialist Jim Pattison, the man who guaranteed bail for Vancouver Canucks' chief executive Tom Scallen, said he is "definitely interested" in acquiring control of the National Hockey League team.

Scallen was sentenced Friday to a four-year prison term after conviction of theft by conversion of $3 million and publishing a false prospectus, but was freed just hours later on bail of $25,000 pending an appeal. Pattison guaranteed the bail by signing the surety.

"The interest has nothing to do with this matter (guaranteeing the bail)," Pattison said, "but we would certainly be interested in acquiring the hockey club if it ever became available.

"Scallen's lawyers had contacted me and asked me if I would be willing to act as bondsman in the event it became necessary. I agreed."

Scallen is president of Medical Investment Corp (Medicor), the Minneapolis-based conglomerate which holds controlling interest in Northwest Sports Enterprises Ltd., the parent company of the Canucks. Scallen is also president of Northwest Sports.

SAVE THOSE CROCODILES

MORGES, Switzerland (AP) — An international group of specialists has announced a campaign to save the rapidly-declining world crocodile population from extinction in what they allege is "uncontrolled killing" for the hide trade.

World Wildlife Fund headquarters here said today specialists report that 15 of 21 existing crocodilian species—including crocodiles, alligators, and caimans—"are already considered as seriously threatened." Several, they report, are "on the verge of extinction."

"The main cause of the rapid and dangerous decline of crocodilians in recent years has been the uncontrolled killing of these animals for the leather trade."

A conservation program, approved by the specialists at a recent meeting at Zululand Game Reserves, provides for specific actions favoring most threatened species and aims at the establishment of a system of sanctuaries. Worldwide surveys are to determine populations and to trace the flow of hides.

AUTOS TARGETS AT WILD PARTY

PORT MOODY (CP) — The bottles were flying as high as the guests at a weekend party held at a private home in this community on the eastern outskirts of Vancouver.

Police from Port Moody and adjoining Coquitlam and Burnaby municipalities, responding to calls from irate motorists who reported their windshields had been smashed by bottles thrown from the home situated alongside the Barnett Highway, arrested 11 of an estimated 70 to 80 persons at the party shortly after midnight Saturday.

The 11 partygoers were charged with obstructing police, possession of dangerous weapons and causing a disturbance. All were scheduled to appear in provincial court here today.

Police said several cars were damaged by the flying bottles but no one was injured.

Woman Elected School Trustee

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — Only 8.3 per cent of the eligible voters turned out Saturday to elect Mrs. June Kearney to a vacancy on the board of Alberni School District No. 70.

She polled 353 votes.

When Pontiac introduced Astre we told you it was right on.

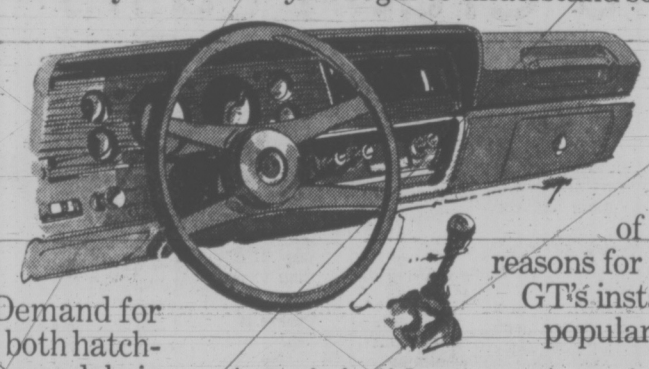
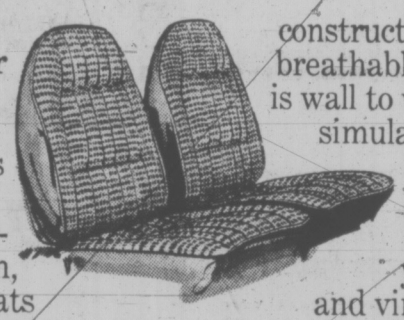
In fact, it looks like Pontiac Astre is the kind of car a lot of you were waiting for. In its first few months, Pontiac Astre is already outselling some other small cars that have been around for years. The reasons are easy to find. Astre is unusually roomy for a small car. It's a responsive, easy-handling car. It offers many important features that you won't find in the top selling import models, like a double-panel acoustic roof, a fail-safe fuel pump and a big 2300 cc engine. And Astre is built right here in Canada.



Our fast-selling GT. Demand for the Astre GT option, in both hatchback and Safari wagon models is very high. For good reason. The GT package includes a high output overhead cam engine, special handling suspension, full instrumentation including a tachometer, a small-diameter steering wheel, wide-styled wheels and fat tires. Add to that Astre's standard features like disc brakes up front, full-time powered ventilation, floor shift and bucket seats and you begin to understand some of the reasons for the GT's instant popularity.



Astre's inside story. Astre is an economy car that puts heavy emphasis on comfort. The seats are of thick, all-foam construction covered with a breathable knit vinyl. There is wall to wall carpeting and simulated woodgrain accents provide an elegant touch. For a little extra you can get a cloth and vinyl upholstery in a bold check pattern, along with matching panels on the doors.

Astre's priced right in there with the imports. Astre's price is right, and so is the model choice. There's the Astre Coupe, the Astre Hatchback (a coupe that virtually transforms into a wagon simply by flipping down the rear seat) and the Astre Safari station wagon that's available with very attractive woodgrain panelling. Like we said, it looks like a lot of you agree with us—Astre is right on!

Horizons Never Beckon When the Thrill Is Gone

If my expression strikes you as somewhat dour this blue Monday it is because I have been invited on a three-weeks, all-expenses-paid tour of Japan.

It isn't the prospect of a return visit to that interesting, fevered nation that's got me down. It's simply the awful realization that I'm not nearly as thrilled as I once would have been. Indeed, looking at myself in the bathroom mirror this morning I was moved to remark, "You're getting to be an old stick-in-the-mud, pal," to which my image replied, "That's putting it mildly, chum."

I am certainly not the first to discover that there's an immutable law of diminishing returns in travel, that the more horizons you cross the less anticipation there is in crossing the next.

Somewhere in his collection of stories, "When the Going Was Good," Evelyn Waugh, far and away the greatest travel writer of all time, reflects on packing for an expedition into the upper reaches of the Amazon and being bemused that his first crossing of the English Channel had given him greater excitement.

One of the British foreign correspondents I used to meet on almost every global assignment — together we covered the Mau-Mau story in Kenya, the Cuban missile crisis, the six-day war in Israel, the Aberfan disaster in Wales and several others — was out this way at Christmas. He wasn't at all surprised to find me so contented in a wee bungalow with some laying hens out back. Seemed all the roving correspondents we'd known have put down roots — this one in a thatch-roofed cottage in Surrey, that one in a small fieldstone farmhouse in Connecticut — and could be stirred now only with a charge of dynamite.

I mustn't leave the impression that I'm against travel. Nothing is as broadening, as mind-expanding, as stimulating. I've had nothing but an encouraging word for every young person who's sought my advice on whether or not to take off. But there is a point of saturation, a point when you've been imbedded in just too many snarling airplane engines and in too many lonely hotel rooms, a point when the fun of it has gone, and when that happens, the record shows, it's time to go home to Mama and the kids and the laying hens.

There comes a time, too, I suppose, when the peril that's out there looms larger than the adventure.

For 20-odd years I flew with utter confidence in anything that could conceivably get off the ground bound in bailing wire or held together with Band-Aids. Now there's not a mighty, modern airliner that goes down without my secret identification with the victims.

I once made it a point to stop off at Acapulco coming or going from South America and to swim in those warm blue waters. Now I see them as thick with man-eating sharks. You couldn't pay me to go wading there.

When the voice on the phone was proposing that grand tour of Japan I was thinking morbidly of the gigantic earthquake that's due in Tokyo, perhaps 10 minutes after my arrival. The Marco Polo of his day has become Chicken-Little and I freely admit it.

But, no, there's a more legitimate reason than merely cowardice to explain why I let my passport lapse. In the years since the war's end, the years when it was, so to speak, my beat, I saw a tremendous change in the world that the traveller knows. To an astonishing degree, the "foreign-ness" disappeared from faraway places, the exotic became the commonplace.

Oh, if you looked for it or if it was your job to find it, you could locate the flavor and the strangeness of distant lands, but the first impressions began to seem all the same. One airport is much the same as the next whether it is Lourenco Marques or Moose Jaw. One Hilton Hotel is much the same as the next whether it is Caracas or Chicago.

The foreign correspondent, whose predecessors were adventurers looking only for the bizarre and the unusual, the tiger hunt, the rickshaw, the dance of the pygmies, the funeral rites beside the Ganges, are now more likely to be concerned only with political or economic stories, interviewing men in air-conditioned offices no different than those at home.

The change has come about, too, through the vast industry of travel. In these past 25 years tourism has taken on unbelievable dimensions. There's simply no corner of the world, east or west, that hasn't been flooded by global holidayers, bus loads and plane loads of them making every foreign place a little bit of Main Street. That abiding vanity of the professional traveller, that he was a discoverer, is no more. He is just another guy in a crowded lobby waiting for the check-out hour to get into his room.

But what was that you said? Japan? Japan, you said? Why, yes, wow! I'm ready when you are.

Blanshard Court: Never Again

Victoria's Rose-Blanshard urban renewal scheme was riddled with injustice, failed to achieve its objective and such a scheme should not be tried again, according to a newly-published study.

Between 1966 and 1969, the city forced 157 households out of their homes on about four city blocks in the Rose and Blanshard Street area to replace them with 90 subsidized rental units called Blanshard Court.

In an exhaustive "anatomy" of the project published in Residential and Neighborhood Studies in Victoria, University of Victoria geographer R. W. Robertson says:

—displaced households were forced to subsidize the scheme by accepting low prices for their property and by not receiving distress compensation.

—the households were forced to compete among themselves on a limited market for alternative low-cost housing.

—the fate of displaced households was not properly followed up, with the result that federal requirements that they get decent housing were not checked.

—the displaced households faced an average of 40 per cent higher monthly housing costs as a direct result of the renewal scheme.

—people living on fixed incomes suffered a drop in standard of living, particularly in recreation after relocating.

—a quarter of the displaced households were forced to move into housing of lower quality than they had occupied in the doomed "slum" area, and 15 per cent of them moved into equally poor housing.

"If the renewal program was meant to relieve the city of blighted residential housing and, as a corollary, to provide housing for low-income families; then it was only marginally effective," Robertson concludes.

He points out that such urban renewal schemes involving large-scale destruction of older homes have been discouraged by the federal government.

The project was not concerned with the human problems of the households living in the doomed area from the outset in 1960, Robertson says.

Of nine reasons given by a Capital Region Planning Board study for going ahead with the project, only the ninth — "There is a need for low-rental housing" — hinted at the housing problems experienced by low-income families, the geographer says.

"A disproportionately high number of families in the renewal area could be considered to be living on critically low incomes, yet only a few sentences of the study were devoted to the problems that might arise through the displacement of these families and individuals."

Nine years later, after millions of dollars had been spent, "equally as many of the Rose-Blanshard households were living in substandard dwellings as before."

For Robertson, the alternative is clear:

"Instead of destroying all the houses in a relatively small area, the urban government should devote its attention to larger tracts, with the aim of purchasing and renovating dilapidated but structurally sound dwellings, and destroying only those buildings which are beyond redemption.

"These properties should not be resold but leased or rented.

"In this manner the urban government could build up a land bank and exert more direct control over land uses as well as real estate speculation.

"The process of renewal would be a continuous program of redevelopment rather than a series of disruptive attacks on blight and, as a consequence, low-income families displaced from substandard housing would not be forced to compete with one another for limited supplies of low-cost housing."

Delay Urged On Costly School Pool

Saanich council should delay entering into an agreement with School District 61 for a new community school at Burnside and Acorn, indoor recreation chairman Ald. Fred Severson urged today.

He indicated an estimate of $350,000 for a swimming pool in the complex is a steep figure to consider immediately following a 6.4 per cent increase in the general tax rate.

"The cost factor is something we have to take into consideration, especially right after the budget. We have to tread carefully," Severson said.

Burnside-Acorn development, designed as a secondary school with community-use facilities built-in, will be discussed at tonight's meeting of council, the alderman said.

A 25-metre pool suggested for the project would equal more than two mills on the tax rate, but Severson said the scheme might qualify for a one-third recreationn grant from the provincial government.

Alternative suggestions for community-use portions of the undertaking include an auditorium and stage, an enlarged gymnasium, or outdoor facilities such as tennis court and playing fields with extras such as change rooms.

Severson said the Sanderson report on recreation should be updated before council decides how to participate in the project.

The 1966 report by A. B. Sanderson and Co. Ltd. projected Saanich recreation needs into the future and led to the municipality's first five-year program of capital projects now ending.

Senior municipal staff is revising the report as a guide to future recreation development.

This will give the Burnside-Acorn school plan perspective, Severson felt.

"When the plan is updated, maybe it will call for a pool at Royal Oak. I would hate to go ahead with it for fear it should go somewhere else," he said.

Proceeding with the school without the community facility would present no problem because the building is designed to take additions, he pointed out.

The alderman said these were his own views, not necessarily those of the whole committee, which he thought should meet again with a Burnside district citizens' committee which helped school authorities design the complex.

"I want to meet with the citizens' committee to see what they really want."

Severson said he had tried to be non-committal on the subject and said council had taken no firm position.

"We have led them (school board) to believe we'd like to be involved But we are not committed," Severson said.

There are no funds for the project in this year's budget.

Whatever Happened To Crab Feasts?

By BRUCE OBEE
Times Staff

Five years ago it was not uncommon for a Vancouver Island picnicker to pluck a few crabs from any tidal pool and boil them on the beach.

But now, a seaside crab feast is about as common as a snowstorm in July.

Statistics gathered by the federal fisheries department show the number of Dungeness crabs, most popular species among crab fanciers, has dropped more than 50 per cent on the B.C. coast since 1968.

The figures are based on the number of crabs landed by B.C. fishermen each year:

	Reported Landings	Amount Paid to Fishermen
1968	4,372,000	$787,000
1969	3,017,000	$682,000
1970	2,548,000	$460,000
1971	1,963,000	$426,000
1972	1,976,000	no figure available

The figures indicate an increase of 13,000 in 1972.

Terry Butler, of Nanaimo's Pacific Biological Station, says Dungeness crabs sold in local fish markets are about four years old so the population increase was actually in 1968.

Researchers at the biological station have been unable to determine the cause of the increased landings between 1971 and 1972, said Butler, "and we don't know if this upward trend is going to continue."

But the slight increase is incomparable to the overwhelming demand by fish markets and restaurants.

Larry Sutherland, president of Coast Shellfish Co. Ltd., Sooke, said 10 or 12 years ago 50 dozen crabs a week could meet the demand.

Now, said Sutherland, "If I could get 75 dozen a day I still couldn't meet the demand."

Sutherland estimates there are only about six Vancouver Island crab fishermen.

"A lot are going out of business," he said.

Current wholesale price is 85 cents a pound for a whole crab, which is about 25 per cent pure meat, said Sutherland.

"Twelve years ago we used to sell them for 25 cents each," he said.

Sutherland's wife, Germaine, manager of Colwood's Fishermen's Market, said, "On a weekend I can sell about 15 dozen a day."

She says whole crab is retailing for 89 cents a pound and pure meat sells at $1.95 a pound.

In Vancouver, where Dungeness crab is rapidly becoming a rare delicacy, whole crab retails for $1.10 a pound and meat is going for $4.60 a pound.

"But we haven't had any for a long time," said a spokesman from Vancouver's New West Seafoods.

R. W. McVay, manager of Miller's Fish Market, 791 Fort, said he gets crab about "once a month."

McVay says there's a shortage of all seafoods and believes one of the reasons is that fishermen can collect unemployment insurance during the off-season and are therefore not fishing as much.

Crabbing enthusiasts who intend to have a crack at catching their own this summer should remember a few rules laid down in the B.C. regulations to the Federal Fisheries Act:

—All crabs must be 6½ inches across the widest part of the shell.

—Six crabs a day per person is the limit.

—Sharp instruments should not be used to spear the crabs because many escape with holes punctured in their shells. They should be caught live.

Federal fisheries regulations officer George McIndoe said violators normally receive a nominal fine but the maximum penalty is a $1,000 fine, or six months in jail or both.

New Emphasis on Bridges By Gov't, Says Islander

A Gabriola Island resident says she has a letter indicating the B.C. government wants to eliminate as many ferries as possible by bulding bridges.

This policy will endanger not only Gabriola but all the Gulf Islands, says June Harrison.

She said today Highways Minister Robert Strachan did not react well Friday at a public meeting when she read him part of a letter on the topic she received from Nanaimo MLA Dave Stupich.

Strachan went before Gabriola residents on Friday and told them that subject to some studies, a major ferry terminal will be built on the south end of the island to replace the Departure Bay terminal.

The islanders are split almost down the middle over the issue, said Mrs. Harrison, who organized a petition against the terminal.

She said in an interview that her letter from Stupich says "the highways department is looking for ways to replace ferries wherever possible."

Mrs. Harrison said she believes those in favor of the new terminal, which will include a highway connection to the mainland, are mainly interested in the Nanaimo-Gabriola link, and not the Gabriola-Vancouver link.

Mrs. Harrison said it is clear that if a proposal is brought to the provincial treasury board that will save money on ferries, it will likely be accepted.

This could result in bridges linking up other Gulf Islands, she said.

TWO YEARS IN JAIL FOR HAVING HEROIN

Richard Victor Fraser, 25, convicted March 20 of possession of heroin, was sentenced to two years less a day by Judge M. L. Drake in Victoria county court today.

Fraser was arrested July 18 after RCMP drug squad officers entered his suite at 0-777 Blanshard and found 13 capsules of heroin. He admitted having a 10-cap-a-day habit.

Referring to Fraser's presentence report, Drake said the accused had a "good background," no previous convictions and there was a good "possibility of rehabilitation in due course."

Full-Time Legal Aid Office To Open Here This Summer

A full-time legal aid office is expected to be opened in Victoria this summer.

Frank Maczko, director of the Legal Aid Society of B.C., said today discussions between the society and the Victoria bar are progressing well and "we're looking to July or August or September for the opening."

The office will be staffed by two lawyers and secretaries who will work full-time on the civil and criminal law problems of people who cannot afford their own legal counsel.

Cost of the office will be borne by the province under new policy announced by Attorney-General Alex Macdonald earlier this year.

Legal aid is now handled in Victoria on a voluntary basis by local lawyers. Their work is co-ordinated by chairman of criminal and civil law sections. The local lawyers also provide free "clinics" to give legal advice to poor people three times a week.

Legal aid will continue to depend on the voluntary assistance of local lawyers, Maczko points out. The full-time legal aid lawyers will take over the co-ordinating function and offer counsel to people coming into the office on a day-to-day basis. But lawyers, working as volunteers, will continue to handle the bulk of legal aid cases before the courts.

"I would hope (the local lawyers) would also be able to continue the clinics because they provide a very useful service," Maczko said.

What the poor people needing legal advice will get extra includes: counsel in matters related to unemployment insurance and welfare, which is not now normally offered and advice in handling claims before small debts court, including tenants' cases against landlords.

The B.C. Legal Aid Society is funded by the Law Foundation, a philanthropic organization of B.C. lawyers. The government pays nominal fees to lawyers who take legal aid criminal cases and has recently extended these payments to cover uncontested divorces.

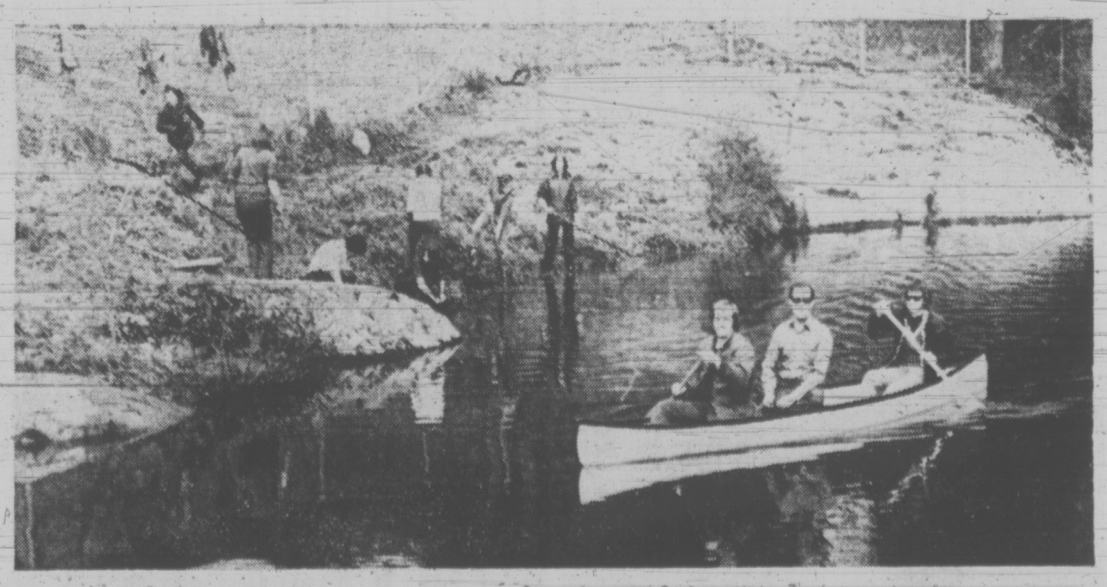
R.T.W.

A: The International Woodworkers of America, followed by the B.C. Teachers Federation, B.C. Government Employees union and Canadian Union of Public Employees.



"THE FISH ARE COMING BACK," exalts Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, being paddled by canoeist-teachers Steve Murphy and Phil Watt on Colquitz River Saturday. On shore, Colquitz Junior Secondary student volunteers take part in clean-up suggested by Curtis. The mayor had noticed an abandoned shopping cart, old tires and other debris in the stream which once was choked to a stagnant trickle. Student effort, filling a municipal truck with junk, was a "beautiful example of community involvement by students and I'm very proud of them," Curtis said.

CNIB Program Is Alive

elizabeth forbes

If anyone hears it whispered that occupational and craft programs have been phased out at the Blanshard Street Centre of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, please shout—long and loud—that it is not true!

I happened on the rumor through a recent letter. In it appeared the following: "I wonder why the CNIB has been closed after all that fine addition . . . now there is no work done there, I understand."

Immediately I went down to the centre to see Miss Isabel Beveridge, the district administrator, and to show her the letter.

Reaction there was to wonder "how on earth" anyone could get suen an erroneous idea, when there is so much doing every day at the centre.

"Of course, we did close our occupational workshop," she said, "but that was three years ago."

Reason? The little group of blind people who used the shop were getting older. Several were in poor health. They started to drop off. "So there was no reason to keep the workshop open."

That didn't mean occupational and craft classes were discontinued too, Miss Beveridge pointed out. They are still "going strong," four half days a week on the second floor of the centre.

Not only that, Georgina Powlyshyn, rehabilitation teacher in charge of the classes, visits blind persons in their homes to extend the same opportunities to those unable to come into the centre.

In both instances, at the centre or in the home, blind persons are given an opportunity to learn techniques which help them to live more comfortably with loss of vision.

These include skills of daily living, mobility, braille, typing, handcrafts, woodwork, grooming and kitchen management.

"We have a large recreation program as well," Isabel Beveridge reminded me.

"Cribbage games, table tennis and shuffleboard take place in the centre and we go out for alley bowling and for swimming."

There are 400 blind people in the Victoria area, she said, and more than half of them are over 80.

Miss Beveridge

If they cannot get out to the centre, members of the CNIB auxiliary visit them. Do their shopping. Take them gifts on their birthdays and make special treats to tempt their appetities. "It all sums up to real devotion."

Then, there is the White Cane Club meeting twice weekly. "It's been active for a good many years."

A talking book library is another service of which the district administrator is justly proud.

Novels, biographies, travel, science fiction and children's literature, recorded on special tapes, are all available to any blind person. "There are hundreds of books from which to choose."

There is also a counselling program for parents of blind children of all ages. "Mothers get together, exchange experiences and in this way, help each other while they are meeting, our volunteers mount a babysitting service for them."

Miss Beveridge is in charge of all these services, not only in Victoria but in an area on Vancouver Island that reaches as far as Port Alberni.

She also handles travel concessions on bus, ferry and train, for the blind—also income tax exemptions. And in the Victoria district, theatre passes and tickets to symphony concerts.

Blind youths are assisted in learning special skills. Some are sent to learn braille at a Vancouver centre.

"Then they return here to enter public and high schools" Miss Beveridge told me.

She spoke of a 15-year-old boy, now in Grade 9. "He learned braille in Vancouver, then came back to regular school here. Now he is using power tools in his class—quite easily. He also does lighting effects in drama."

She introduced me to a teen-ager, Shane Munro, who was busy doing basketry work in a craft class at the Blanshard Street centre when I was there.

He will leave next September for Toronto to take training in medical records stenography at a CNIB centre there.

When the course is finished Shane will return to Victoria, and there is no doubt, he will find work in that field here.

All these services (and a good many more) keep Miss Beveridge and her regular staff of three (Georgina Powlyshyn, Vera Deakin and F. W. Poole) busy throughout the week.

The Blanshard Street centre is the hub of all this activity. And you can be certain there is no thought of phasing out occupational and craft classes or any other services there that will help the blind.

Learn to Like the Crow —He's in Town to Stay

it's our environment

By THE ENVIRONMENTAL CENTRE Of Greater Victoria

By his mere presence, man causes alterations in the natural environment of most other forms of life. Attempts to make further changes in nature's balance are fraught with problems.

QUESTION: We're concerned about the crows that seem to flock in ever-increasing numbers around our neighborhood in spring. Their noisy squawks, especially very early in the morning, are unpleasant, but what is worse is that they disrupt the nesting of robins and our other friendly birds, eating eggs, etc. Isn't there something that can be done to reduce their population? I understand there are now more crows around Victoria than ever before. Mrs. P.M.

ANSWER: It is true that there probably are more crows in the Greater Victoria area than ever before, but it's also true that there are more humans here than ever. Population of crows, no doubt, is related to our own population because crows, like gulls and other scavengers, thrive on our trash.

Authorities have, at times, attempted to reduce the number of crows by shooting some, but their action probably does little more than frighten the birds for a while. Bird experts we consulted believe that it would take a real program of wholesale slaughter — such as heavy shooting of birds at their winter roosts on James and Sidney islands — to really reduce the local crow population and then the reduction probably would be only temporary. In a few years, there'd likely be just as many.

Camosun College biologist Michael Corry said crows have few natural enemies to prey upon them — perhaps the great horned owl or the larger hawks such as the red-tail will take an occasional crow. Available food supply possibly has as much effect as anything on their population.

Scarecrows are notoriously ineffective, so you probably won't want to try one in your back yard. We've hard of a commercial scarecrow designed to look like a man with a gun that periodically gives out a loud bang. That should scare crows, but we're sure you'd find the calling of the crows more pleasant than the banging.

Recorded calls of crows in danger reportedly frighten crows away, but there again you have unpleasant noise.

Some farmers hang artifical hawks beneath balloons with apparent success at scaring crows, but no doubt such a scarecrow would frighten other birds away as well.

Dr. Jeremy B. Tatum of the Victoria Natural History Society, suggests you might as well develop an interest in your crows because they're really part of our environment. And don't worry about your robins and other small birds. True, crows will take an occasional nest of eggs or small birds, but if it weren't for enemies such as crows, we could be up to our necks in robins.

Remember that like the crow, the robin is another bird which has greatly benefited by the technical development of man — there are many more on city lawns than in the deep forest.

QUESTION: Regarding the continuing debate over nuclear power generation for Vancouver Island, isn't one of the overlooked dangers of a nuclear power plant the radioactive wastes? I don't recall seeing wastes mentioned in recent reports. Those wastes remain highly dangerous virtually for ever.—A.B.R.

ANSWER: We weren't aware that the problem of radioactive waste was a forgotten part of our nuclear power question, although you're probably right that the danger of a possible nuclear explosion with resultant release of radiation gets more publicity.

Although many schemes have been suggested for getting rid of highly radioactive wastes, apparently countries like the United States are merely storing the stuff away much as they might store old bombs.

Recently, some scientists have suggested letting the material bury itself deep into the Antarctic ice cap, but since it will remain very dangerous for thousands of years, their plan no doubt will meet with skepticism.

If you have a question about any subject involving our environment, we'd like to hear from you. Leave the question at the Environmental Centre office, 508 Fort Street any weekday afternoon, or mail it directly to "It's Our Environment," care of the Times, 2621 Douglas Street, Victoria.

Fillet of Turbot Casserole High Protein at Low Price

By HILDA BEASTALL

Filleted Turbot is the best fish buy I have found in recent months. A Turbot casserole with spinach and a cheese topping was a great success, and Brooklyn Fish Chowder (my name for it) has been a continuing favorite.

The Turbot in markets locally is from northern European waters. It resembles cod, skate or halibut. The price is attractive at 69 cents a pound when offered as a "special" by one supermarket, with 79 cents their regular price.

This is less than almost any other high protein value food, and a splendid aid in budget balancing without losing nutrition. Even families who never include fish in their meals other than a can of salmon or sardines for sandwiches occasionally, will like the fine flavor and texture of Turbot.

The fillets come frozen solid, no bone, no waste, though normally the skin and bones of fish are boiled to extract extra nuturients, then strained. The resulting liquids are used in soups and jellied salads.

The frozen Turbot fillets are available by asking the meat counter men for it straight from their deep freeze. The pieces weigh from one to one-and-a-half pounds, or are displayed thawed in smaller portions.

Supplies are expected to continue throughout the Lenten season. Most stores will be able to tell you when a fresh lot is expected and be willing to reserve some for you to keep in your own refrigerator freezer or deep freeze.

It is handy for any number of quickly prepared meals, for the required portion is easily broken or cut from a fillet, returning the balance to the freezer. Nearly everyone knows today that fish must not be re-frozen after it has been thawed.

Turbot cooks quickly in a heavy covered frypan. Melt a tablespoon of margarine or your favorite cooking oil. Using medium heat, cook the fish gently covered for 15 or 20 minutes or until it flakes Add a light shaking of salt, a teaspoon of lemon juice and a dusting of paprika over the surface. Don't overcook for fish then loses its flavor, be coming just so much tasteless solid matter.

Serve with hot cooked brown rice, carrots thinly sliced, and either cooked frozen peas or green beans. Freshly cooked spinach or broccoli are especially good with this dish.

Brooklyn Fish Chowder made with Turbot reminds me of the fine hot fish soups served in the numerous "Diners" in Brooklyn during the hungry '30s. A bowlful was a meal to last.

Brooklyn Chowder

2 slices bacon (fat and lean).
1 whole garlic clove section.
1 cup cold water.
Pinch of dried or fresh thyme.

Cut the fish and bacon into half inch dice, put into pan with garlic, thyme and cold water. Bring to boil, then cook gently, stirring often until fish flakes, about 10 minutes. Keep lid on as much as possible.

Then add:
2 cups diced raw potatoes.
1 cup diced raw carrots.
½ cup finely sliced celery stalks and leaves.
¾ teaspoon salt.

Simmer for 15 minutes or until vegetables are fork tender but not mushy, stirring occasionally, and keeping covered as much as possible.

Add 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, chopped spinach, or broccoli sprinkled over the top of the chowder in the pan and cook for 5 minutes.

Any other bright green vegetable will do. I have used the new horseradish tops as they appear now, or bright green Winter Cress.

This amount serves 4 or 6 according to whether you make it a main course for lunch or a soup befor dinner.

Variations will occur to you for vegetables, I have used a half dozen small mushrooms or an equivalent quantity of tuberous (Jerusalem) artichokes, diced and cooked with the fish and bacon.

Counselling Ethics

DEAR ABBY: My husband is 34 years old, and I am 35. We've been married for 12 years. I am a school teacher, and he does counselling. About six months ago he started to buy me some rather expensive presents. At the same time he himself came home with an expensive gold watch, some tailor-made suits, and finally a new expensive automobile.

I knew he couldn't afford all those things on what he made, so I had a long talk with him and he confessed that he has been getting large amounts of money from a woman. He described her as a high-priced call girl. He said he was helping her to work out her problems, that his interest in her was strictly professional and in appreciation for helping her get her head together she kept giving him large amounts of money.

He has been spending a lot of evenings away from home. Does this sound professional to you? — Suspicious.

DEAR SUSPICIOUS: Not very. An ethical counselor usually charges a set fee, and doesn't accept "large amounts of money." It's all right for him to help her get her head together as long as he doesn't take too many things apart.

DEAR ABBY: My husband passed away some time ago. We had a wonderful life together and I never expect to replace him, but I must consider making a new life for myself as I am not yet 50.

My question: When may a widow remove her wedding ring? I have children, and when I wear my rings the men I meet think I'm married, and no respectable man would look twice at a married woman.

On the other hand, if I removed my rings I might be mistaken for a divorcee. What should I do? — YOUNG WIDOW.

DEAR WIDOW: Since you are obviously in the market for another husband, remove your rings. You can quickly let it be known that you are a widow, not a divorcee, if you think men prefer widows which, by the way, ain't necessarily so.

DEAR ABBY: I have a beaut of a squelcher for people who ask me, "How come you aren't married?" I reply, "I'm just lucky, I guess." That stops them cold! — Single by Choice

Natural food faddists have lately become more vociferous in their attacks against white bread. They claim that the modern milling process destroys some 20 important nutrients and that enrichment only replaces four or five of them.

An "Internationally known nutritionist exposes bread as it is today", is a reprint of an article first published in Family Health Magazine, quoting Dr. Jean Mayer, Harvard professor of nutrition.

Mayer tells about the examination of the nutritional value of breads from 44 countries. Top rating went to a non-enriched semi-white bread from England. North American enriched white bread ranked second. Surprisingly, the exquisite tasting French bread was rated poorest from the nutritionist's point of view.

The six-page folder also clarifies common misconceptions about the caloric value of bread. Plain bread is not fattening: A slice only contains 60 calories. However, if you put a restaurant size pat of butter on top, you triple the calories.

The authoritiative information in this folder will make you want to reconsider any derogatory remarks you may hear about our daily bread.

Child Talk Has Own Rules

MENLO PARK, Calif. — "I goed there," said the child.

"I went there," comented his mother.

"No, no," the child protested, "I goed there."

So goes a typical conversation between a small child and his mother. It illustrates one of the things that modern linguists are finding out about how children learn language.

To wit, children have their own sets of rules for speaking any language. The rules change over time and they are not necessarily the same rules used by adults. Thus, the experts say, a parent can coax and coach a child to speak correctly all day long — but the child will not alter the way he speaks until he is innately ready to change.

Traits Noted

Over the last two decades, but especially in just the last few years, students of child language acquisition (as the process is called) have come up with a number of other new and intriguing observations.

Among them:

—During the first stage of learning a language — when one and two-word "sentences" are heard — children in every land speaking every language talk only about the same basic relationships.

—The first sentences of children and of a young chimpanzee taught sign language are virtually indistinguishable.

—There are universal strategies that children use to learn language.

—Before children learn how to talk, they learn how to "mean."

Blank Slates

One camp, represented by Harvard behaviorist B. F. Skinner, says children are born as blank slates. They learn language by interacting with their environment. They learn from outside sources. They hear, imitate and are reinforced by other peope.

The other camp, represented by linguist Noam Chomsky of the Massachusetts Institute of Techonology, claims a child is born already knowning the principles of language before he says his first words. A child uses so-called inborn mental structures to build an abstract rule system or grammar of his language.

Harvard psychologist Roger Brown, who tends to side with Chomsky, has written a soon-to-be-published book called A First Language, The Early Stages (Harvard University Press; $15). In it, he has attempted to summarize much that is known about early language. "The gist of it all is quite surprising," Brown said in a recent interview. "In all languages so far studied — in some very diverse languages — the earliest speech constructions are limited semantically to a single rather small set of relationships. Furthermore, the complications that occur are also everywhere the same."

Children everywhere begin talking in one and two-word sentences such as (using English as an example), "more cookie, "go store," and "book table."

"At this first stage of language developmnt children talk about the location of things the names of objects and actions how things cause other things and about qualities" Dr. Brown said. "They do not yet talk about themselves nor about social relationships. They don't use articles, prepositions or word endings."

Common Lines

This type of speech, which often comes around the age of 18 months has been described as telegraphic in that children sound like talking telegrams.

First stage speech is alike across languages, Brown said, because it reflects the kind of intelligence — most children have at this point. It reflects the notion that all children develop perceptually along common lines.

Linguistics professor Don Slobin of the University of Califorinia at Berkeley has just analyzed 40 different languages in the light of these questions: Are there common orders of acquisition of different linguistic features across languages? What strategies does a baby use in early speaking? What are a child's first guesses as to the nature of languages?

A few of the universals he proposes are:

—Children tend to hear and mimic the ends of words first in most languages. An example in English is a child saying "raf" for giraffe.

—Children pay attention to the order of elements in an utterance. For example, an English-speaking child will learn that "running" is okay but that "ingrun" is not.

Growth Link

—At first a child will avoid rearranging words. Before he learns "can I go?" he will say "I can go' ".

—A child avoids exceptions to rules in his language. In English, "I comed" is used for "I came."

Most psycholinguists today believe that the pacesetter in linguistics growth is the child's cognitive growth. That is, there is a connection between how the child gradually integrates more and more details of the world around him and how he gradually builds a grammer of his own language.

Language, they say, is used only to express what a child already knows. Thought comes first. Language is merely a device for expressing thought.

Effect Limited

Eve Clark, assistant professor of linguistics at Stanford University, is fascinated by this notion. Just now she is interested in all kinds of meaning children attach to words and how this changes over time.

For example, she has noticed that very young children will use the word "doggie" to refer to dog, cat, horse, cow — anything four-legged. "It is a general term," she said the other day, "based on the child's perception of what he thinks it means. Eventually the child adds more words and learns adult categories."

Parents have an effect on the way their children learn language, but there seems to be a limit to this.

"It may come as a surprise to middle-class ' parents," Dr. Brown said, "but they actually have little impact on improving their child's speech.

Three Areas

"There is evidence that parents do not even hear grammatical incorrectness in their children, even though they think they do," Dr. Brown said. "Experiments show parents will correct their children in only three areas: pronunciation, naughty words and irregularities such as "digged" or "goed." But they rarely correct syntax such as "why the dog won't eat?"

If parents cannot hurt the language development of their children can they retard it?

"It is commonly held folk belief that the use or over-use of baby talk" — the form of adult speech which will say "isn't-him-koot" for "isn't-he-cute" — "will retard a child's abilities in language acquisition," Prof. Charles Ferguson of Standard said. "But there are simply no studies showing this is true.

Pensioners Lose Out

TORONTO (CP) — Canada Pension Plan benefits are often lost by persons who don't know how to fill the forms out correctly, A. A. Ficek, a field officer for the plan, said Thursday.

Ficek told a conference on the elderly poor that although the retirement pension eligibility forms require applicants to declare only income earned by working, many people include investments, bank interests and old age pensions.

"I wouldn't want to hazard a guess what the number is," he said in an interview. "I do know that it involves a great number of people. It's a form of double taxation. People have to pay income tax on the money and then they lose money when they declare it as income."

He said the forms caution people to declare only income earned by working, but it is in small print and many people do not see it.

The retirement pension pays a maximum $81 a month.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. National Institutes of Health is considering whether to approve use of living but aborted human fetuses for medical research.

Two of NIH's advisory bodies have suggested such research in recent years, but their recommendations became public only this week, the Washington Post reported. NIH is the prime source of funds for U.S. medical research laboratories.

Bunk Beds Classic Way To Stretch Small Room

Unless you have a wonderful, big old house, you are probably coping with small rooms. Builders give space in development homes to the living areas and the master bedroom, but the children's rooms generally, because the occupants are more or less transient, receive short shrift. To combat small homes, homeowners, and manufacturers, too, contrive to make the most of limited space, and come up with interesting ideas.

Most popular and logical idea is that of bunk beds. They go up and not out and provide good sleeping space while taking up a minimum of floor space. Youngsters like them, too, for either the adventure of Sleeping high, or of being closed in when in the bottom bunk.

Here is a bunk bed arrangement that offers the best, the top bunk is up high, but it is at right angles to the lower bunk, so that although the lower bunk has the cozy, closed-in feeling, it is not as confined as the traditional arrangement of bed-over-bed. The bed is easier to make, too.

A stout ladder supports the outer corner of the upper bunk and reinforces the brackets and boards which hold the bunk against the wall. The fifteen-inch depth of the bunk frame allows the mattress, with bedding, to rest on the bunk bottom and leave several inches of frame extending above the bed as a security measure.

Although the molding outlines on the lower bunk are purely decorative, space below the mattress could have been put to work with the installation of drawers for extra bedding.

GRINDING REMEDY CLAIMED

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States Army dentists have reported they may have found a new way to eliminate the frustrating habit of tooth grinding, by having tooth-grinders practise grinding their teeth until they're uncomfortable.

It could spare dental and even psychiatric treatment now required, they said.

The technique calls for off-and-on intentional grinding for about six minutes a day for two weeks, said Lt.-Col. Marvin Levin of the Army Institute of Dental Research.

It apparently eliminated the habit in 11 of 14 inveterate female tooth grinders tested in an army experiment, he told a meeting of the International Association for Dental Research.

He added that the three patients who were unsuccessful in eliminating the habit were all teen-agers who, it was felt, had not consistently engaged in the exercises.

Dentists say tooth grinding can wear down the teeth and also cause painful disalignment of jaw bones.

86 INDICTED IN DRUG RAIDS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Police and federal narcotics agents announced today the indictment of 86 alleged drug dealers, "including some of the biggest dealers" in the metropolitan area, on federal charges of conspiracy to sell dangerous drugs.

Daniel P. Casey, regional director of the federal bureau of narcotics and dangerous drugs, said that 62 of the 86 persons had been arrested in raids which began early Saturday.

Four of those named were being sought in Detroit, he said.

Casey said the 86 were members of "a series of interconnected" rings which had links to organized crime.

Union Dues Stay at Home

TORONTO (CP) — Dennis McDermott, Canadian United Auto Workers director, said Sunday the international union has agreed to a new financial formula that guarantees that union dues collected in Canada will be spent in Canada.

McDermott, who also is an international vice president, said Canadian members at the same time will have unlimited access to the international strike fund.

He said the international officers agreed to allow publication of an exclusively-Canadian union paper and establish a separate Canadian research department.

The actions were taken to reinforce the Canadian identity of the UAW, he said.

McDermott said the international has agreed "to spend in Canada as much as we put into the pooled fund, without any restrictions on strike benefits. 'And if we need a subsidy, they'll look at that."

He said the Canadian members are not being forced to remain in the international and the officers would not stand in the way if the Canadians want to go on their own.

The organizers also announced that in an effort to reduce costs the bobsled and luge events will be held on the same artificial ice track.

Pierre Upstages Ont. Liberals

OTTAWA (CP) — Provincial matters were pushed into the background by the federal presence over the weekend as Ontario Liberals held their annual convention.

Plans for an October provincial leadership scrap and a slim indication that Robert Nixon would not carry through year-long plans to step down as leader were submerged by the appearance of Prime Minister Trudeau and his men.

At one point, Trudeau and a band of 13 cabinet ministers took over the meeting in a question-and-answer session with about 850 delegates.

More Labor-Management Talks Planned for B.C. Interior

A three-day closed-door weekend conference on labor-management relations in the Empress Hotel was successful and productive, Labor Minister Bill King said today.

He said further meetings are planned. Tentative sites are Nelson and Prince George.

"I hope I will be able to translate some of the policies that we have developed as a result of these hearings at the fall session of the legislature," he said.

Management groups decided to release to the press their submissions to King, senior labor department officials and the government's advisory committee after saying earlier they would not be released.

The B.C. Federation of Labor held back its brief, but it leaked out.

The advisory committee comprises Dr. Noel Hall, director of the institute of industrial relations at University of B.C., UBC law professor James Matkin and Vancouver lawyer D. E. McTaggart.

A common front of B.C. employers, a group of 25 management associations speaking through the B.C. Employers Co-ordinating Committee, recommended a larger — and longer — role for mediation officers.

The employers wanted extension by mutual agreement of the five-day limit to start bargaining; extension of the bargaining period before appointment of a mediator to 20 days from five days; appointment of mediators for 20 days instead of 10, and giving the labor minister power to impose "cooling off" periods in "critical instances."

They also want more mediation officers (there now are five) with improvements in pay and conditions to attract top-flight people.

Other points in the employers' briefs included:

—Labor minister to appoint observers to sit in during early stages of negotiations of special significance;

—Bring labor and industry together in regular meetings to improve communications;

HIRE TROUBLE SHOOTERS

—Encourage employment of specialists to act as trouble-shooters or special mediators in various industries;

—Enact legislation establishing the principle of councils of unions for single bargaining fronts where there are a multiplicity of bargaining units, in a single industry or operation;

—Prohibit national and international agreements in industries coming under provincial jurisdiction;

—Tighten picketing regulations to allow picketing only during a legal strike, only at the operation where the dispute exists and only "in form and number which does not offend public policy against violence, threats and intimidation";

—Contracts recognizing secondary boycotts and "hot cargo" be declared null and void;

—The Labor Relations Board chairman (now deputy labor minister Bill Sands) should be someone not directly connected with government. The board should give written reasons for all decisions and meetings should be open.

MEETING 'PRODUCTIVE'

Bill Hamilton, president of the Employers Council of B.C., described the weekend meeting as "profiitable, interesting and productive. We are looking for good things to come from this interchange."

The B.C Federation of Labor argued that restrictions against picketing should be removed by repealing the 1959 Trade Unions Act.

The federation said the Criminal Code provides adequate protection against any illegal acts which might occur from picketing in a dispute or in union organizing drives.

Other points in the federation's presentation included:

—Reduce strike notice to 48 hours from 72 hours;

—Allow a strike or lockout during the appointment of a mediator;

SHIFT TO VANCOUVER

—Shift senior officials of the labor department to Vancouver from Victoria;

—Eliminate technical objections by employers to union certification applications;

—Bring B.C. fishermen under new labor legislation;

—Make union membership a condition of employment within 30 days of a person being hired where a union is organized;

—Place burden of proof on an employer that an employee has been discharged unfairly;

LOUGHEED PROTEST

COQUITLAM (CP) — John Symonds, president of the Ranch Park Community Association, said Sunday his organization wants a public hearing on the proposed relocation of the Lougheed Highway, near Riverview hospital.

The association is prepared to go to any lengths to stop the proposed relocation, he said.

GOVERNMENT AT HILLSIDE

McGovern Stand On Pipe Rapped

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Gov. William A. Egan has told Senator George McGovern that he has taken an "incomprehensible" position in supporting a Canadian pipeline route for shipment of North Slope oil.

Egan, in a letter to the South Dakota Democrat, said McGovern was acting in "blatant contradiction" to promises he made during his 1972 presidential campaign.

The governor told McGovern and 10 other midwestern Democrats the Alaskan route was "imminently superior" to the Canadian alternative from environmental, financial and national interest standpoints.

McGovern and 10 other senators of a midwestern caucus asked President Nixon last week to act "at the earliest possible time" to implement a trans-Canadian line.

The senators said the trans-Alaska pipeline would move more oil to the West Coast than necessary.

Egan, a Democrat, endorsed McGovern's presidential candidacy only after the senator promised to work for construction of the Alaska line.

The caucus, Egan said, "urges hasty construction of a pipeline through pristine country presenting potential environmental hazards far greater than any along the proposed Alaska route over which you have expressed so much environmental concern. I cannot but believe that your recent action in joining the statement to the president was either frivolously taken or based solely on narrow, regional interests."

OLD FRIEND RETURNS

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Attending a performance of Handel's Messiah as Easter approaches is like greeting an old friend on a feast day. There is somehow a special significance about the encounter.

On Sunday at the Royal Theatre, a Victoria Choral Society chorus of 94 voices, a slightly enlarged but nevertheless authentic Handellian orchestra and four soloists, conducted by Laszlo Gati, provided a moving performance of the oratorio.

The Victoria Symphony Orchestra is efficient, the strings well articulated and cohesive under the leadership of Canada's notable Steven Staryk.

The quartet of soloists was outstanding. John Arab's fine big, opulent tenor which opens the performance after the sinfony, is superb endowing Comfort Ye and Every Valley with a glowing warmth and immense authority.

Baritone Donald Cant was impressive. This is a splendid full young voice, technically accomplished as his performance of the aria, Why Do the Nations, clearly revealed.

After that virtuoso accomplishment Cant went on to the concluding aria, The Trumpet Shall Sound, and this was a triumph both for himself and the clear articulation and shining sound of Boyd Hood's trumpet.

There is a distinctly operatic character to Nona Mari's lyric sop rano.It is a strong, richly colored voice that was highly effective in Rejoice Greatly and provided the exaltation and assurance sometimes missed by singers in I Know That My Redeemer Liveth.

Demands on the mezzo soprano are great and Kathleen Rudell, who has a voice of lovely quality, lacks nevertheless, something of the strength and power necessary for a number like But Who May Abide.

Still she renders her part of that glorious aria, He Shall Feed His Flock with a reverent, simple beauty that is wholly effective.

We will never have a fully satisfactory performance of any work of this kind as long as we have to bury our choruses well to the back of a proscenium stage.

The effect is to dull attack and the general resonance of the tone.

Despite this unavoidable physical problem, however, Rodney Webster's excellent work in preparing the Choral Society singers results in a performance that has precision, is secure, provides a satisfying blend and exceptionally fine diction.

In fact, diction all through this work, which will be repeated tonight at the Royal, is as fine as anything I have ever heard.

WILD GOOSE CHASE was just that on the eighth fairway at Brookfield Country Club near Cambridge, Ont. Apart from the usual hazards of the course, there's an additional problem for golfers in the shape of a mean old Canada Goose that has a nasty habit of attacking golfers. The wildlife department was called in to remove the hazard, but the old bird proved too wily. Next weekend, however . . .

Refinery Again Pumping Oil

BEIRUT (UPI) — Pumping of crude oil resumed at the American-owned Sidon refinery only 16 hours after explosions Saturday that burned out one of its storage tanks.

The Sidon refinery takes oil pumped from Saudi Arabia. Some is refined for use in Lebanon and the rest is shipped to western consumers.

Investigations into the sabotage of the storage tank is continuing, according to Beirut newspapers.

The newspaper An Nahar said today military investigators are now almost completely sure the sabotage was not carried out either by Israelis or by Palestinian guerrillas.

But Cairo's semi-official newspaper Al Gomhouriya said the United States collaborated in the sabotage.

The editorial said the action was taken to create friction between the guerrillas and Saudi Arabian and Lebanese authorities, at the expense of only minor damage to the American installations.

It said new American plans were aimed at dealing blows to the guerrillas because once they were silenced "most Arabs will be silent."

The newspaper also repeated charges that American agents collaborated with the Israelis in last week's raid on Beirut during which the Israelis assassinated three Palestinian leaders. The U.S. state department has denied these charges.

In Jerusalem, a district judge ordered two Arab east Jerusalem newspapermen jailed for 15 days pending the outcome of an investigation into their report that Israel and Jordan are co-operating in the war against Arab guerrillas.

The two men, editor Joseph Nasri Nasr and assistant editor Jamil Hamad of the weekly Al Fajr, said in an article published Saturday that the Jordanians had helped the Israelis plan last Tuesday's commando raid into Beirut.

With the Middle East crisis simmering again, King Hassan II of Morocco said today the only thing left for the Arab nations in their conflict with Israel is force and the sword.

Earlier, Beirut newspapers said Moslem demonstrators clashed Sunday with armed security forces in the Syrian city of Homs. The newspapers, quoting Lebanese travellers, said security forces fired on the demonstrators and several persons were killed or injured.

Homs for the weekend returned to the northern port of Tripoli when the trouble broke out.

The state-run Syrian press and radio made no mention of the demonstrations. Homs is 15 miles from Lebanon's northern border and the Beirut press reports said hundreds of persons visiting

The newspaper Al Yom quoted the travellers as saying the demonstrators chanted slogans hostile to the government of President Hafez Assad.

Those Muscles Are Aching But It's Cultural Enrichment

There were many aching muscles at MacKenzie Elementary School last week — but it was all in the name of cultural enrichment.

Students at the school spent a week of rigoruous gymnastics training under the direction of Janos and Gabriela Herb as part of Greater Victoria school board's cultural enrichment program.

The four-month program, financed by a $23,500 Local Initiatives Program grant, allows more than a dozen specialized instructors to visit elementary schools in the district and teach children their skills.

Inclused in the program are handicraft experts, dance movement teachers, an orchestral group and an outdoor recreation researcher.

The Herbs visit two schools a week, taking over all the physical education classes for a basic training course in gymnastics.

Before coming to Canada, Herb was a physical education professor in Hungary and coached the national gymnastics team that won a silver medal in the 1968 Olympics.

He says the flexibility and muscle control of Canadian children are very poor and gymnastics training should be basic to school programs. Team sports do not provide the same level of body development, he says, and should not be played until children gain proper muscle control through gymnastics.

Herb said all children can do gymnastics provided they follow a continuous and gradual program of skill development. In three sessions, he added, every child can learn to do a handstand.

Discipline of the mind as well as the body is most important and Herb keeps strict control of his classes.

"My class takes PE much more seriously," said MacKenzie teacher Dave Brekke, as he watched his Grade 6 class doing some basic exercises.

"It really affects how they perform," he said, "and I think they like it more."

Herb says he and his wife have received more than 800 thank-you cards and letters from the pupils they've taught both in Victoria and in Sooke school district.

Herb hopes to start instructing PE teachers at the University of Victoria after he has taken some English courses and satisfied university degree requirements. He now coaches the UVic gymnastics team.

The Cultural Enrichment Program ends June 1.

HUMAN CHAIN SAVES YOUTH

TORONTO (CP) — Robert James Thomson, 19, of suburban West Hill was recovering in hospital today after being trapped for 90 minutes under a four-ton boulder in Lake Ontario Sunday.

The youth had been climbing a 60-foot embankment with two canoeing companions in the nearby Rouge River conservation area when the boulder dislodged. It toppled into the water pinning him waist-deep in a sitting position.

A human chain of 50 rescuers, pulling on ropes, rescued the youth.

Officials said he is recovering in hospital from exposure, multiple bruises and possible internal injuries.

Fire Chief Don Lynde of nearby Pickering said a log took most of the weight of the boulder and saved Thomson's life.

He said the youth, in sweater and jeans, "had gone past the shivering stage," and his body temperature had reached a "dangerous level" in the 40-degree water.

He just said "please get it off" when rescuers reached him, Lynde said.

Thomson "screamed out" several times and said, "It's getting heavier, it's getting heavier."

Cables and chains were slung under the boulder and with the help of a tow truck, volunteers pulled on them, using bydraulic jacks to allow firemen to cut the log and get Thomson out.

"He was pretty scared, but he was conscious throughout the whole thing," said Lynde.

"It was darned cold!"

Union Backs B.C. Strikers

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Union workers at Hiram Walker and Sons Ltd. voted Sunday to continue to support striking workers at the company's distillery in Winfield, B.C.

The 600 workers, members of the Distillery Workers Union, also gave their executive authority to take "whatever action is necessary" to ensure that products from the Windsor plant do not reach customers normally served by the Winfield plant.

Antique Missing

TOKYO (AP) — An antique tea bowl worth $61,538, was reported stolen Sunday from a showcase at a Tokyo department store. Police said the bowl was made between 1573 and 1615, regarded as the golden era of Japanese pottery making.

9 IN MEMORIAM

BASSETT — In loving memory of my beloved husband, Harry Bassett, who passed away April 15, 1969.
Nothing can ever take away
The love a heart holds dear
Fond memories linger every day
Remembrance keeps him dear.
—Lilian and Hazel and Bassett families.

CLIFF — In fond and loving memory of our dear Mom and Nana, Rosina Violet "Called Home", April 16, 1963. Dad and Granddad, Charles Wm., Jan. 27, 1962. Also Brother and Uncle Fred, suddenly at Port Alberni, Dec. 20, 1955.
The Saviour came one evening
To walk through His Garden,
He touched each flower one by one,
But the ones He chose were "Ours"
—We miss you dear ones. The Twins, Norah and Violet, Dolly, three sons and families.

WHITE — Mrs. Marion White: April 15, 1971.
In our home she is fondly remembered.
Sweet memories cling to her name;
Those who loved her in life sincerely,
Still love her in death just the same.
—Jack White and Family

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me: thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.
PSALM 23.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Regurgitation

During my years as a gastoenterologist (stomach and bowel specialist), I saw many interesting problems that came to people with bowel difficulties, but one of the most curious was that of regurgitation.

What is regurgitation? It is different from vomiting. With vomiting, the stomach is likely to be emptied suddenly at one time. The act is usually preceded by nausea, and then the person retches, with a contraction of the abdominal muscles and the diaphragm (the muscle that separates the abdominal cavity from the chest cavity) and up comes the material from the stomach.

With regurgitation, the person rarely has any nausea, and he has no obvious contractions of the abdominal muscles or his diaphragm. His vomiting centre (a spot in the brain which gives the message to vomit to the bowel) does not seem to have anything to do with the phenomenon.

Usually the regurgitator is a woman. She will say that the food comes up in mouthfuls without any effort on her part. Also, the trouble usually starts while she is at the dinner table, or shortly after eating. She may say that she "boils over" much as a baby does when his stomach is too full. Then the process may go on for hours, and she will keep swallowing the food down again as fast as it comes up.

The cause is evidently a reversed peristalsis in the stomach and gullet. Paristalsis means the rhythmic contractions of the bowel, which normally run from the throat downward along the digestive tract to the rectum, and keep food moving along through the whole process of digestion.

Interestingly, there is rarely any burning of the esophagus, as there is when the person complains of heartburn. The woman is more likely to complain of regurgitation when she is menstruating, or pregnant, or constipated.

Regurgitation appears also in some nervous men. The tendency runs in some families, and it is much worse if the person has some highly nervous or neurotic ancestors, or has an unstable personalty. Always in bad cases I ask if ome persons in the family are psychotic.

Many of the highly nervous or neurotic girls who suffer from that curious condition called anorexia nervosa (nervous loss of appetite) also regurgitate. They eat but little, and they regurgitate a good part of that.

HOW TO WRITE
A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc. for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call.

GARDENING

Not All Can Grow Christmas-Rose

The commonly grown Helleborus niger, known as the Christmas-rose though it is a herbaceous plant belonging to the Buttercup family, is found to grow supremely well in some gardens while in others it merely exists.

We know some of its requirements, yet every garden cannot supply them all. A leafy, humus-rich soil can be contrived, but a place open to a little morning sun yet sheltered from all wind is not so easily provided.

The leaves of hellebores rank as evergreen, yet the old ones are replaced annually in spring on some species. If they are exposed to considerable wind through the summer months while they should be busily feeding the plants to produce winter flowers, they become ragged, browned and practically useless for their job.

Anyone who has a good plant with strong stems of pure white flowers in winter profusion, should leave it alone for as long as the plant remains healthy.

Spring removal of old leaves, a surface mulch of mixed leafmould and old manure with a handful of bonemeal for good measure, enough water during the spring and summer — these attentions are appreciated.

If division is necessary do it in April so that its growing season will quickly get the roots into the soil.

The same treatment can be given the so-called Lenten-rose, Helleborus orientalis, having several pink or scarlet colored flowers to one stem. The flower stem is taller than in H. niger, and carries several leaves. This species has almost completed its season, and may be divided by the end of April.

Helleborus should be left to form massive patches of bloom. They are then able to shelter self sown seedlings which will grow along with the parents and add different forms of color shading.

If you know this hellebore with its year-round, sharply pointed stiff leaves with three completely divided segments, and the tall stem of many exquisite lime green flowers, you will agree all these descriptive adjectives are not only excusable but necessary.

It is not alone the unusual flower color which is so attention-holding, but the whole stance of the plant. It is bold and handsome like a fine piece of architecture, and like it, needs a suitable background.

Don't give H. argutifolius a border of brightly colored annuals and perennials to distract your eyes, but let it associate with a companion planting of grey leaved Nepeta mussini (Catmint).

Santolia incana (Lavender-cotton) is another fine leaved grey shrubby plant to associate well. Even the small yellow flowers will not conflict with the clear lime green of the hellebore.

In good soil and a mostly sunny garden, this splendid hellebore will probably prove itself your favorite of the whole tribe.

SOLUTION TUESDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

The most frequently-occurring type of play in bridge is the straight-forward 50-50 finesse. The opportunity to finesse arises, on the average, about once per deal. To the expert, the finesse is usually a last resort play, for he cannot maintain his winning ways if he stakes his existence on 50-50 propositions.

The non-expert, on the other hand, generally accepts the finesse as a "good thing" — and thus frequently comes to grief when there was no necessity to have done so. Such was the case in today's deal, which came up in a non-expert rubber-bridge game.

North-South vulnerable. North deals.

♡ A 4
◇ 6 3 2
♣ 8 6 5 4 3

WEST
♡ K 8 5 3 2
◇ J 10 8 4
♣ K 10

EAST
♡ J 10 9 6
◇ K Q 9

SOUTH
♠ J 10 9 8 4 2
♡ Q 7
◇ A 7 5
♣ A Q

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ◇.

After capturing West's diamond lead with his ace, declarer cashed the board's ace and king of trumps, gathering in the adversely held pieces. He then led a low club and finessed his queen. Upon winning with the king, West continued the diamond suit, East taking his queen and king. East then shifted to the heart jack, which was covered by South's queen and West's king, dummy's ace winning. In time, South had to lose a heart trick, and incur a one-trick set.

As declarer played the hand, his fate rested on a club finesse. Actually, if South had held the doubleton A-x of clubs (instead of the A-Q), he probably would have fulfilled his contract, for then there would have been no lure of a finesse.

The correct play was to cash the ace of trumps at trick two. Then would come a club to South's ace, after which the queen of clubs would be led and conceded to West's king. A diamond lead by West would now enable East to cash two tricks in that suit. Next would come the jack of hearts, South's queen, West's king, and dummy's ace.

A third club lead would then be ruffed with declarer's nine, after which dummy would be entered via the trump king. A fourth club lead would next be ruffed — and the board's fifth club would be a winner.

Entering dummy via the trump queen, declarer would discard his losing heart on dummy's established fifth club. This declarer would fulfill his contract whenever the six outstanding clubs were divided no worse than 4-2, and 84 per cent chance.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Doug rattled some candies in the box. "I'll give you half if you guess how many there are."

"Big deal!" replied his sister. "How can I guess?"

"Okay," Doug smiled. "If you take nine from the square of that half you get four times what there are."

No guessing, but the girl figured it out. You try.

Thanks for an idea to D. J. Watts of Victoria.

(Answer tomorrow.)

Friday's answer: Sides were 57, 65, and 107 feet.

DETROIT (AP) — The Polish national Olympic amateur boxing team swept all but one bout against a group of Detroit amateurs Sunday night. Only a victory by Detroit heavyweight Johnny Hudson in the final fight prevented a sweep.

Cambodia Invaded By Saigon Forces

Times News Services

More South Vietnamese troops were reported moving toward the Cambodian frontier today following the first crossing of the border that Saigon forces are claimed to have made since the Vietnam ceasefire.

But in Saigon today, the South Vietnam military command formally denied its troops had penetrated Cambodian territory.

Spokesman Col. Le Trung Hein said that reports of a South Vietnamese army operation into Cambodia's Takeo region, as carried by foreign news agencies and radio stations, "are false."

"At the present time," he said, "the South Vietnamese army is not carrying out any operations on Cambodian territory."

However, journalists at Tinh Bien reported a regiment of South Vietnamese rangers, backed by 25 armored troop carriers, crossed the border between Chau Doc and Takeo to push back units of the North Vietnamese first division.

The reports indicated that the South Vietnamese operations along the border were defensive, aimed at driving Communist forces from the border rather than the start of a major offensive to lift the threat to Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital.

South Vietnamese air force gunships joined an armored column on the Cambodian side of the border, and new fighting was reported on the Vietnamese side of the frontier.

The Viet Cong called the march into Cambodia "a blunt and very dangerous act of the Saigon military forces."

A Viet Cong broadcast said the operation was ordered by the United States and "criminally violates the independence, unification, sovereignty, neutrality and territorial integrity of Cambodia as well as the Paris agreement and the international agreement on Vietnam."

The U.S. appeared more concerned with events in neighboring Laos. In Washington today, the defence department warned that because of new fighting in Laos, it may order U.S. planes to renew bombing campaigns there.

Pentagon spokesman Jerry Friedheim said North Vietnamese forces led by tanks had overrun the Laotian town of the Vieng, defended by Laotian government forces, within the last several hours.

He described it as "a major violation of the ceasefire."

He said an announcement about whether U.S. B-52 bombers had begun renewed strikes over Laos would come from Pacific command head-

EVERYTHING KOSHER

Manchester Guardian

SOUTHAMPTON, Eng. — With 10 rabbis on board to supervise koshering procedures and 30 servicemen guarding its vital points, the Queen Elizabeth sailed on its month-long cruise to Israel Sunday shortly after reports were received that Israeli intelligence sources had heard rumors that Arab guerrillas planned a suicide mission against the 60,000-ton liner.

Some sources were talking of a kamikaze air attack, others of a speedboat loaded with explosives driven against the ship's hull. But aboard the QE-2 all was calm, secure and kosher.

"I think we are doing more good for world peace by making this voyage for Israel's 25th anniversary than by being scared off," said Rabbi Samuel Korff, spiritual leader of the 560, predominantly U.S. Jews aboard.

Four Drown In Weekend Accidents

BILLY VOSPER
. . . drowning victim

Four persons from the Greater Victoria area, three of them from one family, lost their lives Saturday in two boating accidents on Vancouver Island.

Lost in the first accident which happened on Buttle Lake near Campbell River are WO John Daniel Vosper, 48, of 2356 Tacon; his wife Myrtle Lylian, 44, and their youngest son William Bentley, II.

Dennis John Lynch, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Lynch of 1972 St. Anne, was drowned when the canoe in which he and Keith Gage-Cole, 25, of 2405 Hamiota, were shooting rapids near the mouth of the Nimpkish River overturned, throwing them into a whirlpool.

Although there were lifejackets in the two-seater canoe neither of the two men was wearing them at the time.

The Vospers' 14-year-old daughter, Linda Coleen, was also in the family's 10-foot aluminum boat when it was swamped, throwing the four into five-foot swells.

Vosper, who worked as a steward in the Chief Petty Officers' mess at CFB Esquimalt, was meet manager for the Coho Swim Club at the Centennial Pool in Langford.

Al Aylard, the team's coach, said today that Mrs. Vosper, too, was extremely active with the club.

"Mickey was a great woman," he said, "she worked very hard on all kinds of committees."

They were between two sets of rapids when their craft overturned. Gage-Cole managed to pull the canoe to shore and paddled about a mile downstream to a Crown Zellerbach campsite at Beaver Cove.

A campsite worker travelled two miles to Port McNeill and phoned the RCMP detachment at Port Hardy.

The police arrived on the scene at 8:45 p.m. They were joined in the search for Lynch's body by 24 people from the campsite and three crew members from the coast guard cutter Racer.

The search was resumed Sunday morning and divers found Lynch's body pinned on a ledge about 30 feet below the surface.

The search is still continu-

A Long Lonely Wait . . .

CAMPBELL RIVER — Hoping against all reason, 14-year-old Linda Colleen Vosper watched Sunday as police divers braved the icy waters of Buttle Lake to search for the bodies of her father and brother.

The girl, who had been plucked from the same waters hours earlier, watched with little visible emotion.

By dusk, when police ended their search for the day, her tears had dried and her face had set in a mask of shock.

The tragedy which had befallen Linda had come home to her.

On Saturday she had been part of a family of four, pitching a camp in the Ralph River campground beside the lake, which was to become a common grave for her father and brother and the killer of her mother.

With the help of his wife, Myrtle Lylian, 44, and his son, William Bentley, 11, and Linda he pitched his tent trailer in a campsite at the provincial campground, 35 miles southwest of here.

After the tent was pitched the family loaded into their 10-foot aluminum boat to brave the choppy waters of the lake.

Then at about 3:30 p.m. tragedy struck.

Texas Twister Terror

TORNADOES slammed into three Texas towns Sunday killing eight persons and injuring 35. Flooding took two more lives. Property damage was estimated at several millions of dollars. Thunderstorms, hail and strong winds which followed hit almost every section of the state.

The first tornado hit Plainview, one of the homes damaged is shown above, in which three people were killed. Later, another twister hit Pearsall, killing five while the third tornado hit Corsicana, about 50 miles south of Dallas. The persons killed in the Pearsall twister were found alongside the freeway among pieces of cars.

'Esso Dealer' Ad 'Nonsense'

A spokesman for automotive retailers in British Columbia today dismissed a protest advertisement by "concerned Esso dealers" as "nonsense."

J. Lloyd Kinneard, secretary of the Automotive Retailers Association, was commenting on a three-column page-deep advertisement in the Vancouver Province which called on the government to "set aside" the Energy Act which received legislative approval Saturday. (See Story Page 20).

The advertisement said that "even though the automotive industry has called for government legislation to deal with certain injustices taking place in our industry, we the concerned Esso dealers of B.C. do protest the speed with which Bill 148 (the Energy Act) has been rushed through legislature."

The anonymous dealers, who signed themselves "the concerned Esso dealers of B.C., their employees and families," said the Energy Act should have been set aside for necessary discussion.

They said the act could be detrimental to the public, is an encroachment on free enterprise, "takes away our basic rights under the Bill of Human Rights," that there has been insufficient time to study and make representations concerning the act and that the Energy Commission "has complete dictatorial powers unaffected by any judicial act."

GM TO HELP FIRENZA TRADE-IN

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — General Motors of Canada Ltd. announced today it is offering the original owners of its imported compact Firenza a $250 credit if they trade in their vehicles on a 1973 or future GM car.

The offer follows a series of complaints from owners of the British-made Firenza and the company's decision to stop importing the vehicle.

The Victoria distributor, Empress Pontiac Buick, says it has not heard from GM on the matter, but expects the credit will apply here, too.

Woman Slain In Revenge

BELFAST (AP) — A 59-year-old Protestant housewife answering a knock at her door was killed about midnight Sunday night by gunmen who didn't see their victim.

Security forces say Margaret Miller might have been shot in revenge for the slaying 24 hours earlier of Robert Millen, 23, one of the few Protestants in the Irish Republican Army.

Four bullets ripped through the front door of Mrs. Miller's Belfast home, hitting her in the chest as she came down the hall to answer the door. Her killer jumped into a waiting car and escaped.

Millen was shot from a speeding car in Belfast Saturday night while on a vigilante patrol with other members of the IRA's Marxist Official wing. He was believed the first Protestant member of the largely Roman Catholic IRA to die since communal warfare broke out in Northern Ireland nearly four years ago.

The deaths of Mrs. Miller and Millen raised the confirmed fatality toll in the strife to 774.

Meanwhile, in Dublin, Sean MacStiofain, former chief of staff of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, was released from jail today and said: "I remain an unrepentant Republican separatist."

MacStiofain, 44, looked pale and drawn from his 59-day hunger strike.

"I'm not well physically but in good spirits," he said.

His wife Maire picked him up at the military jail at the Curragh, an army camp west of Dublin.

Hooson Out Of City Post

By ROLAND MORGAN
Times Staff

Victoria city manager Bill Hooson was asked for his resignation by city council Friday, after just over two years in the $25,000 a year position.

Hooson's departure was effective immediately and his desk had been cleared today.

An official city hall bulletin from the mayor's office blamed Hooson's inability to keep up with "very substantial increases" in the complexity and load of the city administration. He is 52.

Ald. Percy Frampton said in an interview: "Bill's a hell of a good guy but he hasn't been well.

"In the last few months he hasn't been the executive officer we would have hoped.

"This is a pretty tough racket and a guy's got to be pretty tough."

Financial expert Jim Bramley, comptroller-treasurer, has been appointed acting city manager. He is the senior city executive.

"We've agonized over this for the past six months," Mayor Peter Pollen said.

He said the decision to ask for Hooson's resignation was reached in a closed meeting of council members Friday night and finalized on Saturday.

The social work graduate joined the city staff as assistant welfare officer in 1950 and began welfare administrator in 1951.

He was appointed assistant city manager in 1964 and took over the city from manager Dennis Young in December, 1970.

Hooson rarely sought or achieved headlines. One of his few appearances before the public eye was in 1968 when as assistant city manager he had to smash down the door of a reluctant householder in the Rose-Blanshard slum clearance scheme.

In 1972 Ald. Percy Frampton claimed Hooson was being bypassed in Mayor Pollen's new policy of encouraging aldermen to consult directly with city hall department heads.

The official statement said council would be asked to of-

Colcel Forests 'Under-Used'

Control of over nine million acres of valuable forest lands in northwest B.C. and the west Kootenays, by what was virtually an absentee landlord, has resulted in serious under-use of the resource, the legislature was told today.

Resources Minister Bob Williams said the land controlled by Columbia Cellulose Limited was effectively "enclosed" from the people of B.C. and the company's failure to manage it properly "has been a cost to this province."

He was moving second reading of a bill which would establish a new Crown corporation called British Columbia Cellulose Limited to manage the government's controlling interest in the operations of Columbia Cellulose Limited.

The legislation would also ratify an agreement signed April 2 under which the government will acquire 79 per cent of the assets of Canadian Cellulose Company Limited — Colcel's principal operating subsidiary — in return for guaranteeing long-term debts amounting to more than $70.5 million which are owed by Canadian Cellulose to bondholders, banks and investors.

Williams said the legislation is an attempt to meet the problems of two major regions of B.C. which include the northwest cities of Prince Rupert and Terrace as well as the communities of Revelstoke, Nakuskp and Castlegar in the southern interior.

He noted that the two "older line" parties, the Liberals and Conservatives, had supported similar legislation last week which would set up a crown corporation to manage the paper operation in the coastal town of Ocean Falls.

He said he welcomes that change of attitude, and added that the economic and "human problems" must merit similar support in the case of Celcel.

Williams said the principle involved is the same in ensuring the economic future and livelihood of not just a small community but a major region of the province.

He said the land involved — "one and a half times the size of the state of Switzerland" — has been alienated in the same way that common lands in Britain were enclosed hundreds of years ago, and in the case of the Arrow Lakes that has meant "the trees have been grossly underused for decades."

MEDICINE BLOCKED

PINE RIDGE, S.D. (UPI) — A helicopter loaded with medical supplies was prevented from entering Wounded Knee Sunday by local Oglala Sioux Indians who vowed to keep all supplies out of the hamlet until militant Indians end their 48-day occupation.

Federal authorities, caught in the squeeze of trying to keep local peace and end the occupation without bloodshed, apparently gave in to the local Indians when the helicopter was turned back at federal roadblock No. 1.

Meanwhile, an attorney for American Indian Movement (AIM) members entrenched at Wounded Knee said in New York Sunday he would attempt to obtain a restraining order against the local Indians who set up the blockade of supplies.

Reports of sporadic shooting in the Wounded Knee area early Sunday remained unconfirmed today. A rancher, George Coats, said four armed men came to his ranch and drove off several head of his cattle.

There were no negotiations scheduled today between government officials and Indians occupying Wounded Knee. The militants possibly were awaiting the outcome of the scheduled court appearance of two AIM leaders in the U.S. district court at Pierre, S.D., today.

The band of about a dozen local Indians trying to prevent supplies from entering Wounded Knee set up their own roadblock outside the federal perimeter surrounding the hamlet and flatly rejected government requests to pull down the barrier.

The Indians called themselves "irate citizens" and the "original residents of Wounded Knee." They said their action was prompted by the government's failure to get militants to abandon their occupation.

Although the Indians involved were, not the same ones who earlier set up a roadblock under direction of Oglala Sioux tribal chairman Dick Wilson, Wilson said he was "behind them 100 per cent."

Horizons Never Beckon When the Thrill Is Gone

If my expression strikes you as somewhat dour this blue Monday it is because I have been invited on a three-weeks, all-expenses-paid tour of Japan.

It isn't the prospect of a return visit to that interesting, fevered nation that's got me down. It's simply the awful realization that I'm not nearly as thrilled as I once would have been. Indeed, looking at myself in the bathroom mirror this morning I was moved to remark, "You're getting to be an old stick-in-the-mud, pal," to which my image replied, "That's putting it mildly, chum."

I am certainly not the first to discover that there's an immutable law of diminishing returns in travel, that the more horizons you cross the less anticipation there is in crossing the next.

Somewhere in his collection of stories, "When the Going Was Good," Evelyn Waugh, far and away the greatest travel writer of all time, reflects on packing for an expedition into the upper reaches of the Amazon and being bemused that his first crossing of the English Channel had given him greater excitement.

One of the British foreign correspondents I used to meet on almost every global assignment — together we covered the Mau-Mau story in Kenya, the Cuban missile crisis, the six-day war in Israel, the Aberfan disaster in Wales and several others — was out this way at Christmas. He wasn't at all surprised to find me so contented in a wee bungalow with some laying hens out back. Seemed all the roving correspondents we'd known have put down roots — this one in a thatch-roofed cottage in Surrey, that one in a small fieldstone farmhouse in Connecticut — and could be stirred now only with a charge of dynamite.

I mustn't leave the impression that I'm against travel. Nothing is as broadening, as mind-expanding, as stimulating. I've had nothing but an encouraging word for every young person who's sought my advice on whether or not to take off. But there is a point of saturation, a point when you've been imbedded in just too many snarling airplane engines and in too many lonely hotel rooms, a point when the fun of it has gone, and when that happens, the record shows, it's time to go home to Mama and the kids and the laying hens.

There comes a time, too, I suppose, when the peril that's out there looms larger than the adventure.

For 20-odd years I flew with utter confidence in anything that could conceivably get off the ground bound in bailing wire or held together with Band-Aids. Now there's not a mighty, modern airliner that goes down without my secret identification with the victims.

I once made it a point to stop off at Acapulco coming or going from South America and to swim in those warm blue waters. Now I see them as thick with man-eating sharks. You couldn't pay me to go wading there.

When the voice on the phone was proposing that grand tour of Japan I was thinking morbidly of the gigantic earthquake that's due in Tokyo, perhaps 10 minutes after my arrival. The Marco Polo of his day has become Chicken-Little and I freely admit it.

But, no, there's a more legitimate reason than merely cowardice to explain why I let my passport lapse. In the years since the war's end, the years when it was, so to speak, my beat, I saw a tremendous change in the world that the traveller knows. To an astonishing degree, the "foreign-ness" disappeared from faraway places, the exotic became the commonplace.

Oh, if you looked for it or if it was your job to find it, you could locate the flavor and the strangeness of distant lands, but the first impressions began to seem all the same. One airport is much the same as the next whether it is Lourenco Marques or Moose Jaw. One Hilton Hotel is much the same as the next whether it is Caracas or Chicago.

The foreign correspondent, whose predecessors were adventurers looking only for the bizarre and the unusual, the tiger hunt, the rickshaw, the dance of the pygmies, the funeral rites beside the Ganges, are now more likely to be concerned only with political or economic stories, interviewing men in air-conditioned offices no different than those at home.

The change has come about, too, through the vast industry of travel. In these past 25 years tourism has taken on unbelievable dimensions. There's simply no corner of the world, east or west, that hasn't been flooded by global holidayers, bus loads and plane loads of them making every foreign place a little bit of Main Street. That abiding vanity of the professional traveller, that he was a discoverer, is no more. He is just another guy in a crowded lobby waiting for the check-out hour to get into his room.

But what was that you said? Japan? Japan, you said? Why, yes, wow! I'm ready when you are.

Blanshard Court: Never Again

Victoria's Rose-Blanshard urban renewal scheme was riddled with injustice, failed to achieve its objective and such a scheme should not be tried again, according to a newly-published study.

Between 1966 and 1969, the city forced 157 households out of their homes on about four city blocks in the Rose and Blanshard Street area to replace them with 90 subsidized rental units called Blanshard Court.

In an exhaustive "anatomy" of the project published in Residential and Neighborhood Studies in Victoria, University of Victoria geographer R. W. Robertson says:

—displaced households were forced to subsidize the scheme by accepting low prices for their property and by not receiving distress compensation.

—the households were forced to compete among themselves on a limited market for alternative low-cost housing.

—the fate of displaced households was not properly followed up, with the result that federal requirements that they get decent housing were not checked.

—the displaced households faced an average of 40 per cent higher monthly housing costs as a direct result of the renewal scheme.

—people living on fixed incomes suffered a drop in standard of living, particularly in recreation after relocating.

—a quarter of the displaced households were forced to move into housing of lower quality than they had occupied in the doomed "slum" area, and 15 per cent of them moved into equally poor housing.

"If the renewal program was meant to relieve the city of blighted residential housing and, as a corollary, to provide housing for low-income families, then it was only marginally effective," Robertson concludes.

He points out that such urban renewal schemes involving large-scale destruction of older homes have been discouraged by the federal government.

The project was not concerned with the human problems of the households living in the doomed area from the outset in 1960, Robertson says.

Of nine reasons given by a Capital Region Planning Board study for going ahead with the project, only the ninth — "There is a need for low-rental housing" — hinted at the housing problems experienced by low-income families, the geographer says.

"A disproportionately high number of families in the renewal area could be considered to be living on critically low incomes, yet only a few sentences of the study were devoted to the problems that might arise through the displacement of these families and individuals."

Nine years later, after millions of dollars had been spent, "equally as many of the Rose-Blanshard households were living in substandard dwellings as before."

For Robertson, the alternative is clear:

"Instead of destroying all the houses in a relatively small area, the urban government should devote its attention to larger tracts, with the aim of purchasing and renovating dilapidated but structurally sound dwellings, and destroying only those buildings which are beyond redemption.

"These properties should not be resold but leased or rented.

"In this manner the urban government could build up a land bank and exert more direct control over land uses as well as real estate speculation.

"The process of renewal would be a continuous program of redevelopment rather than a series of disruptive attacks on blight and, as a consequence, low-income families displaced from substandard housing would not be forced to compete with one another for limited supplies of low-cost housing."

Delay Urged On Costly School Pool

Saanich council should delay entering into an agreement with School District 61 for a new community school at Burnside and Acorn, indoor recreation chairman Ald. Fred Severson urged today.

He indicated an estimate of $350,000 for a swimming pool in the complex is a steep figure to consider immediately following a 6.4 per cent increase in the general tax rate.

"The cost factor is something we have to take into consideration, especially right after the budget. We have to tread carefully," Severson said.

Burnise-Acorn development, designed as a secondary school with community-use facilities built-in, will be discussed at tonight's meeting of council, the aldermen said.

A 25-metre pool suggested for the project would equal more than two mills on the tax rate, but Severson said the scheme might qualify for a one-third recreationn grant from the provincial government.

Alternative suggestions for community-use portions of the undertaking include an auditorium and stage, an enlarged gymnasium, or outdoor facilities such as tennis court and playing fields with extras such as change rooms.

Severson said the Sanderson report on recreation should be updated before council decides how to participate in the project.

The 1966 report by A. B. Sanderson and Co. Ltd. projected Saanich recreation needs into the future and led to the municipality's first five-year program of capital projects now ending.

Senior municipal staff is revising the report as a guide to future recreation development.

This will give the Burnside-Acorn school plan perspective, Severson felt.

"When the plan is updated, maybe it will call for a pool at Royal Oak. I would hate to go ahead with it for fear it should go somewhere else," he said.

Proceeding with the school without the community facility would present no problem because the building is designed to take additions, he pointed out.

The alderman said these were his own views, not necessarily those of the whole committee, which he thought should meet again with a Burnside district citizens' committee which helped school authorities design the complex.

"I want to meet with the citizens' committee to see what they really want."

Severson said he had tried to be non-committal on the subject and said council had taken no firm position.

"We have led them (school board) to believe we'd like to be involved But we are not committed," Severson said.

There are no funds for the project in this year's budget.

Whatever Happened To Crab Feasts?

By BRUCE OBEE
Times Staff

Five years ago it was not uncommon for a Vancouver Island picnicker to pluck a few crabs from any tidal pool and boil them on the beach.

But now, a seaside crab feast is about as common as a snowstorm in July.

Statistics gathered by the federal fisheries department show the number of Dungeness crabs, most popular species among crab fanciers, has dropped more than 50 per cent on the B.C. coast since 1968.

The figures are based on the number of crabs landed by B.C. fishermen each year:

	Reported Landings	Amount Paid to Fishermen
1968	4,372,000	$787,000
1969	3,017,000	$682,000
1970	2,548,000	$460,000
1971	1,963,000	$426,000
1972	1,976,000	no figure available

The figures indicate an increase of 13,000 in 1972.

Terry Butler, of Nanaimo's Pacific Biological Station, says Dungeness crabs sold in local fish markets are about four years old so the population increase was actually in 1968.

Researchers at the biological station have been unable to determine the cause of the increased landings between 1971 and 1972, said Butler, "and we don't know if this upward trend is going to continue."

But the slight increase is incomparable to the overwhelming demand by fish markets and restaurants.

Larry Sutherland, president of Coast Shellfish Co. Ltd., Sooke, said 10 or 12 years ago 50 dozen crabs a week could meet the demand.

Now, said Sutherland, "If I could get 75 dozen a day I still couldn't meet the demand."

Sutherland estimates there are only about six Vancouver Island crab fishermen.

"A lot are going out of business," he said.

Current wholesale price is 85 cents a pound for a whole crab, which is about 25 per cent pure meat, said Sutherland.

"Twelve years ago we used to sell them for 25 cents each," he said.

Sutherland's wife, Germaine, manager of Colwood's Fishermen's Market, said, "On a weekend I can sell about 15 dozen a day."

She says whole crab is retailing for 89 cents a pound and pure meat sells at $1.95 a pound.

In Vancouver, where Dungeness crab is rapidly becoming a rare delicacy, whole crab retails for $1.10 a pound and meat is going for $4.60 a pound.

"But we haven't had any for a long time," said a spokesman from Vancouver's New West Seafoods.

R. W. McVay, manager of Miller's Fish Market, 791 Fort, said he gets crab about "once a month."

McVay says there's a shortage of all seafoods and believes one of the reasons is that fishermen can collect unemployment insurance during the off-season and are therefore not fishing as much.

Crabbing enthusiasts who intend to have a crack at catching their own this summer should remember a few rules laid down in the B.C. regulations to the Federal Fisheries Act:

—All crabs must be 6½ inches across the widest part of the shell.

—Six crabs a day per person is the limit.

—Sharp instruments should not be used to spear the crabs because many escape with holes punctured in their shells. They should be caught live.

Federal fisheries regulations officer George McIndoe said violators normally receive a nominal fine but the maximum penalty is a $1,000 fine, or six months in jail or both.

New Emphasis on Bridges By Gov't, Says Islander

A Gabriola Island resident says she has a letter indicating the B.C. government wants to eliminate as many ferries as possible by bulding bridges.

This policy will endanger not only Gabriola but all the Gulf Islands, says June Harrison.

She said today Highways Minister Robert Strachan did not react well Friday at a public meeting when she read him part of a letter on the topic she received from Nanaimo MLA Dave Stupich.

Strachan went before Gabriola residents on Friday and told them that subject to some studies, a major ferry terminal will be built on the south end of the island to replace the Departure Bay terminal.

The islanders are split almost down the middle over the issue, said Mrs. Harrison, who organized a petition against the terminal.

She said in an interview that her letter from Stupich says "the highways department is looking for ways to replace ferries wherever possible."

Mrs. Harrison said she believes those in favor of the new terminal, which will include a highway connection to the mainland, are mainly interested in the Nanaimo-Gabriola link, and not the Gabriola-Vancouver link.

Mrs. Harrison said it is clear that if a proposal is brought to the provincial treasury board that will save money on ferries, it will likely be accepted.

This could result in bridges linking up other Gulf Islands, she said.

TWO YEARS IN JAIL FOR HAVING HEROIN

Richard Victor Fraser, 25, convicted March 20 of possession of heroin, was sentenced to two years less a day by Judge M. L. Drake in Victoria county court today.

Fraser was arrested July 18 after RCMP drug squad officers entered his suite at 0-777 Blanshard and found 13 capsules of heroin. He admitted having a 10-cap-a-day habit.

Referring to Fraser's presentence report, Drake said the accused had a "good background," no previous convictions and there was a good "possibility of rehabilitation in due course."

Full-Time Legal Aid Office To Open Here This Summer

A full-time legal aid office is expected to be opened in Victoria this summer.

Frank Maczko, director of the Legal Aid Society of B.C., said today discussions between the society and the Victoria bar are progressing well and "we're looking to July or August or September for the opening."

The office will be staffed by two lawyers and secretaries who will work full-time on the civil and criminal law problems of people who cannot afford their own legal counsel.

Cost of the office will be borne by the province under new policy announced by Attorney-General Alex Macdonald earlier this year.

Legal aid is now handled in Victoria on a voluntary basis by local lawyers. Their work is co-ordinated by chairman of criminal and civil law sections. The local lawyers also provide free "clinics" to give tion and offer counsel to people coming into the office on a day-to-day basis. But lawyers, legal advice to poor people three times a week.

Legal aid will continue to depend on the voluntary assistance of local lawyers, Maczko points out. The full-time legal aid lawyers will take over the co-ordinating functions working as volunteers, will continue to handle the bulk of legal aid cases before the courts.

"I would hope (the local lawyers) would also be able to continue the clinics because they provide a very useful service," Maczko said.

What the poor people needing legal advice will get extra includes: counsel in matters related to unemployment insurance and welfare, which is not now normally offered and advice in handling claims before small debts court, including tenants' cases against landlords.

The B.C. Legal Aid Society is funded by the Law Foundation a philanthropic organization of B.C. lawyers. The government pays nominal fees to lawyers who take legal aid criminal cases and has recently extended these payments to cover uncontested divorces.

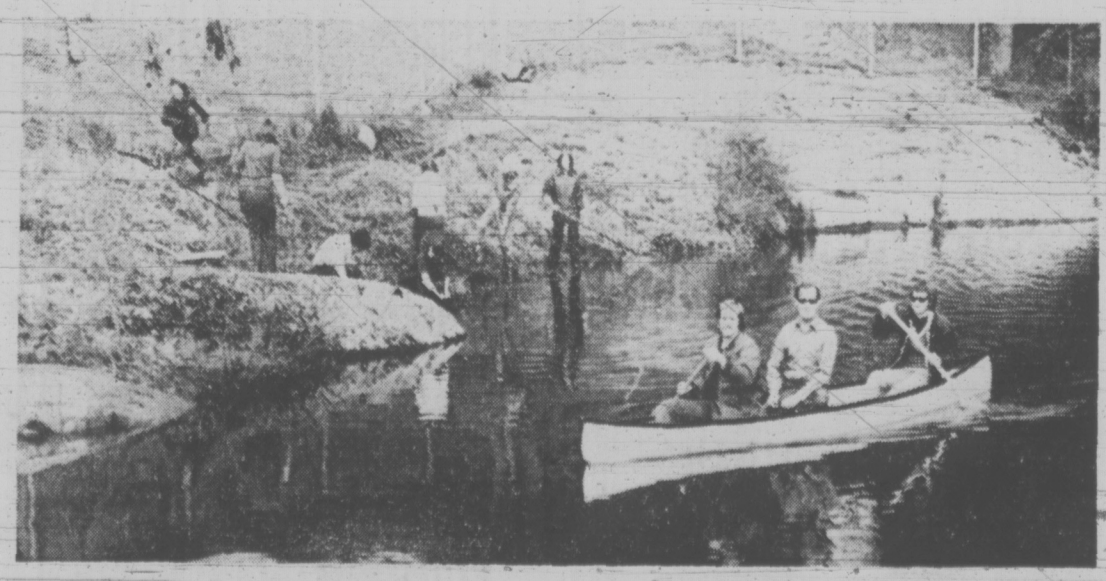
Q: Which are the biggest unions in British Columbia? —R.T.W.

the International Woodworkers of America, followed by the B.C. Teachers Federation, B.C. Government Employees union and Canadian Union of Public Employees.



"THE FISH ARE COMING BACK," exalts Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, being paddled by canoeist-teachers Steve Murphy and Phil Watt on Colquitz River Saturday. On shore, Colquitz Junior Secondary student volunteers take part in clean-up suggested by Curtis. The mayor had noticed an abandoned shopping cart, old tires and other debris in the stream which once was choked to a stagnant trickle. Student effort, filling a municipal truck with junk, was a "beautiful example of community involvement by students and I'm very proud of them," Curtis said. (Irving Strickland photo.)

Horizons Never Beckon When the Thrill Is Gone

If my expression strikes you as somewhat dour this blue Monday it is because I have been invited on a three-weeks, all-expenses-paid tour of Japan.

It isn't the prospect of a return visit to that interesting, fevered nation that's got me down. It's simply the awful realization that I'm not nearly as thrilled as I once would have been. Indeed, looking at myself in the bathroom mirror this morning I was moved to remark, "You're getting to be an old stick-in-the-mud, pal," to which my image replied, "That's putting it mildly, chum."

I am certainly not the first to discover that there's an immutable law of diminishing returns in travel, that the more horizons you cross the less anticipation there is in crossing the next.

Somewhere in his collection of stories, "When the Going Was Good," Evelyn Waugh, far and away the greatest travel writer of all time, reflects on packing for an expedition into the upper reaches of the Amazon and being bemused that his first crossing of the English Channel had given him greater excitement.

One of the British foreign correspondents I used to meet on almost every global assignment — together we covered the Mau-Mau story in Kenya, the Cuban missile crisis, the six-day war in Israel, the Aberfan disaster in Wales and several others — was out this way at Christmas. He wasn't at all surprised to find me so contented in a wee bungalow with some laying hens out back. Seemed all the roving correspondents we'd known have put down roots — this one in a thatch-roofed cottage in Surrey, that one in a small fieldstone farmhouse in Connecticut — and could be stirred now only with a charge of dynamite.

I mustn't leave the impression that I'm against travel. Nothing is as broadening, as mind-expanding, as stimulating. I've had nothing but an encouraging word for every young person who's sought my advice on whether or not to take off. But there is a point of saturation, a point when you've been imbedded in just too many snarling airplane engines and in too many lonely hotel rooms, a point when the fun of it has gone, and when that happens, the record shows, it's time to go home to Mama and the kids and the laying hens.

There comes a time, too, I suppose, when the peril that's out there looms larger than the adventure.

For 20-odd years I flew with utter confidence in anything that could conceivably get off the ground bound in bailing wire or held together with Band-Aids. Now there's not a mighty, modern airliner that goes down without my secret identification with the victims.

I once made it a point to stop off at Acapulco coming or going from South America and to swim in those warm blue waters. Now I see them as thick with man-eating sharks. You couldn't pay me to go wading there.

When the voice on the phone was proposing that grand tour of Japan I was thinking morbidly of the gigantic earthquake that's due in Tokyo, perhaps 10 minutes after my arrival. The Marco Polo of his day has become Chicken-Little and I freely admit it.

But, no, there's a more legitimate reason than merely cowardice to explain why I let my passport lapse. In the years since the war's end, the years when it was, so to speak, my beat, I saw a tremendous change in the world that the traveller knows. To an astonishing degree, the "foreign-ness" disappeared from faraway places, the exotic became the commonplace.

Oh, if you looked for it or if it was your job to find it, you could locate the flavor and the strangeness of distant lands, but the first impressions began to seem all the same. One airport is much the same as the next whether it is Lourenco Marques or Moose Jaw. One Hilton Hotel is much the same as the next whether it is Caracas or Chicago.

The foreign correspondent, whose predecessors were adventurers looking only for the bizarre and the unusual, the tiger hunt, the rickshaw, the dance of the pygmies, the funeral rites beside the Ganges, are now more likely to be concerned only with political or economic stories, interviewing men in air-conditioned offices no different than those at home.

The change has come about, too, through the vast industry of travel. In these past 25 years tourism has taken on unbelievable dimensions. There's simply no corner of the world, east or west, that hasn't been flooded by global holidayers, bus loads and plane loads of them making every foreign place a little bit of Main Street. That abiding vanity of the professional traveller, that he was a discoverer, is no more. He is just another guy in a crowded lobby waiting for the check-out hour to get into his room.

But what was that you said? Japan? Japan, you said?, Why, yes, wow! I'm ready when you are.

Blanshard Court: Never Again

Victoria's Rose-Blanshard urban renewal scheme was riddled with injustice, failed to achieve its objective and such a scheme should not be tried again, according to a newly-published study.

Between 1966 and 1969, the city forced 157 households out of their homes on about four city blocks in the Rose and Blanshard Street area to replace them with 90 subsidized rental units called Blanshard Court.

In an exhaustive "anatomy" of the project published in Residential and Neighborhood Studies in Victoria, University of Victoria geographer R. W. Robertson says:

—displaced households were forced to subsidize the scheme by accepting low prices for their property and by not receiving distress compensation.

—the households were forced to compete among themselves on a limited market for alternative low-cost housing.

—the fate of displaced households was not properly followed up, with the result that federal requirements that they get decent housing were not checked.

—the displaced households faced an average of 40 per cent higher monthly housing costs as a direct result of the renewal scheme.

—people living on fixed incomes suffered a drop in standard of living, particularly in recreation after relocating.

—a quarter of the displaced households were forced to move into housing of lower quality than they had occupied in the doomed "slum" area, and 15 per cent of them moved into equally poor housing.

"If the renewal program was meant to relieve the city of blighted residential housing and, as a corollary, to provide housing for low-income families, then it was only marginally effective," Robertson concludes.

He points out that such urban renewal schemes involving large-scale destruction of older homes have been discouraged by the federal government.

The project was not concerned with the human problems of the households living in the doomed area from the outset in 1960, Robertson says.

Of nine reasons given by a Capital Region Planning Board study for going ahead with the project, only the ninth — "There is a need for low-rental housing" — hinted at the housing problems experienced by low-income families, the geographer says.

"A disproportionately high number of families in the renewal area could be considered to be living on critically low incomes, yet only a few sentences of the study were devoted to the problems that might arise through the displacement of these families and individuals."

Nine years later, after millions of dollars had been spent, "equally as many of the Rose-Blanshard households were living in substandard dwellings as before."

For Robertson, the alternative is clear:

"Instead of destroying all the houses in a relatively small area, the urban government should devote its attention to larger tracts, with the aim of purchasing and renovating dilapidated but structurally sound dwellings, and destroying only those buildings which are beyond redemption.

"These properties should not be resold but leased or rented.

"In this manner the urban government could build up a land bank and exert more direct control over land uses as well as real estate speculation.

"The process of renewal would be a continuous program of redevelopment rather than a series of disruptive attacks on blight and, as a consequence, low-income families displaced from substandard housing would not be forced to compete with one another for limited supplies of low-cost housing."

Delay Urged On Costly School Pool

Saanich council should delay entering into an agreement with School District 61 for a new community school at Burnside and Acorn, indoor recreation chairman Ald. Fred Severson urged today.

He indicated an estimate of $350,000 for a swimming pool in the complex is a steep figure to consider immediately following a 6.4 per cent increase in the general tax rate.

"The cost factor is something we have to take into consideration, especially right after the budget. We have to tread carefully," Severson said.

Burnside-Acorn development, designed as a secondary school with community-use facilities built-in, will be discussed at tonight's meeting of council, the alderman said.

A 25-metre pool suggested for the project would equal more than two mills on the tax rate, but Severson said the scheme might qualify for a one-third recreationn grant from the provincial government.

Alternative suggestions for community-use portions of the undertaking include an auditorium and stage, an enlarged gymnasium, or outdoor facilities such as tennis court and playing fields with extras such as change rooms.

Severson said the Sanderson report on recréation should be updated before council decides how to participate in the project.

The 1966 report by A. B. Sanderson and Co. Ltd. projected Saanich recreation needs into the future and led to the municipality's first five-year program of capital projects now ending.

Senior municipal staff is revising the report as a guide to future recreation development.

This will give the Burnside-Acorn school plan perspective, Severson felt.

"When the plan is updated, maybe it will call for a pool at Royal Oak. I would hate to go ahead with it for fear it should go somewhere else,," he said.

Proceeding with the school without the community facility would present no problem because the building is designed to take additions, he pointed out.

The alderman said these were his own views, not necessarily those of the whole committee, which he thought should meet again with a Burnside district citizens' committee which helped school authorities design the complex.

"I want to meet with the citizens' committee to see what they really want."

Severson said he had tried to be non-committal on the subject and said council had taken no firm position,

"We have led them (school board) to believe we'd like to be involved But we are not committed," Severson said.

There are no funds for the project in this year's budget.

Whatever Happened To Crab Feasts?

By BRUCE OBEE
Times Staff

Five years ago it was not uncommon for a Vancouver Island picnicker to pluck a few crabs from any tidal pool and boil them on the beach.

But now, a seaside crab feast is about as common as a snowstorm in July.

Statistics gathered by the federal fisheries department show the number of Dungeness crabs, most popular species among crab fanciers, has dropped more than 50 per cent on the B.C. coast since 1968.

The figures are based on the number of crabs landed by B.C. fishermen each year:

	Reported Landings	Amount Paid to Fishermen
1968	4,372,000	$787,000
1969	3,017,000	$682,000
1970	2,548,000	$460,000
1971	1,963,000	$426,000
1972	1,976,000	no figure available

The figures indicate an increase of 13,000 in 1972.

Terry Butler, of Nanaimo's Pacific Biological Station, says Dungeness crabs sold in local fish markets are about four years old so the population increase was actually in 1968.

Researchers at the biological station have been unable to determine the cause of the increased landings between 1971 and 1972, said Butler, "and we don't know if this upward trend is going to continue."

But the slight increase is incomparable to the overwhelming demand by fish markets and restaurants.

Larry Sutherland, president of Coast Shellfish Co. Ltd., Sooke, said 10 or 12 years ago 50 dozen crabs a week could meet the demand.

Now, said Sutherland, "If I could get 75 dozen a day I still couldn't meet the demand."

Sutherland estimates there are only about six Vancouver Island crab fishermen.

"A lot are going out of business," he said.

Current wholesale price is 85 cents a pound for a whole crab, which is about 25 per cent pure meat, said Sutherland.

"Twelve years ago we used to sell them for 25 cents each," he said.

Sutherland's wife, Germaine, manager of Colwood's Fishermen's Market, said, "On a weekend I can sell about 15 dozen a day."

She says whole crab is retailing for 89 cents a pound and pure meat sells at $1.95 a half pound.

In Vancouver, where Dungeness crab is rapidly becoming a rare delicacy, whole crab retails for $1.10 a pound and meat is going for $4.60 a pound.

"But we haven't had any for a long time," said a spokesman from Vancouver's New West Seafoods.

R. W. McVay, manager of Miller's Fish Market, 791 Fort, said he gets crab about "once a month."

McVay says there's a shortage of all seafoods and believes one of the reasons is that fishermen can collect unemployment insurance during the off-season and are therefore not fishing as much.

Crabbing enthusiasts who intend to have a crack at catching their own this summer should remember a few rules laid down in the B.C. regulations to the Federal Fisheries Act:

—All crabs must be 6½ inches across the widest part of the shell.

—Six crabs a day per person is the limit.

—Sharp instruments should not be used to spear the crabs because many escape with holes punctured in their shells. They should be caught live.

Federal fisheries regulations officer George McIndoe said violators normally receive a nominal fine but the maximum penalty is a $1,000 fine, or six months in jail or both.

New Emphasis on Bridges By Gov't, Says Islander

A Gabriola Island resident says she has a letter indicating the B.C. government wants to eliminate as many ferries as possible by bulding bridges.

This policy will endanger not only Gabriola but all the Gulf Islands, says June Harrison.

She said today Highways Minister Robert Strachan did not react well Friday at a public meeting when she read him part of a letter on the topic she received from Nanaimo MLA Dave Stupich.

Strachan went before Gabriola residents on Friday and told them that subject to some studies, a major ferry terminal will be built on the south end of the island to replace the Departure Bay terminal.

The islanders are split almost down the middle over the issue, said Mrs. Harrison, who organized a petition against the terminal.

She said in an interview that her letter from Stupich says "the highways department is looking for ways to replace ferries wherever possible."

Mrs. Harrison said she believes those in favor of the new terminal, which will include a highway connection to the mainland, are mainly interested in the Nanaimo-Gabriola link, and not the Gabriola-Vancouver link.

Mrs. Harrison said it is clear that if a proposal is brought to the provincial treasury board that will save money on ferries, it will likely be accepted.

This could result in bridges linking up other Gulf Islands, she said.

TWO YEARS IN JAIL FOR HAVING HEROIN

Richard Victor Fraser, 25, convicted March 20 of possession of heroin, was sentenced to two years less a day by Judge M. L. Drake in Victoria county court today.

Fraser was arrested July 18 after RCMP drug squad officers entered his suite at 0-777 Blanshard and found 13 capsules of heroin. He admitted having a 10-cap-a-day habit.

Referring to Fraser's presentence report, Drake said the accused had a "good background," no previous convictions and there was a good "possibility of rehabilitation in due course."

Full-Time Legal Aid Office To Open Here This Summer

A full-time legal aid office is expected to be opened in Victoria this summer.

Frank Maczko, director of the Legal Aid Society of B.C., said today discussions between the society and the Victoria bar are progressing well and "we're looking to July or August or September for the opening."

The office will be staffed by two lawyers and secretaries who will work full-time on the civil and criminal law problems of people who cannot afford their own legal counsel.

Cost of the office will be borne by the province under new policy announced by Attorney-General Alex Macdonald earlier this year.

Legal aid is now handled in Victoria on a voluntary basis by local lawyers. Their work is co-ordinated by chairman of criminal and civil law sections. The local lawyers also provide free "clinics" to give legal advice to poor people three times a week.

Legal aid will continue to depend on the voluntary assistance of local lawyers, Maczko points out. The full-time legal aid lawyers will take over the co-ordinating function and offer counsel to people coming into the office on a day-to-day basis. But lawyers, working as volunteers, will continue to handle the bulk of legal aid cases before the courts.

"I would hope (the local lawyers) would also be able to continue the clinics because they provide a very useful service," Maczko said.

What the poor people needing legal advice will get extra includes: counsel in matters related to unemployment insurance and welfare, which is not now normally offered and advice in handling claims before small debts court, including tenants' cases against landlords.

The B.C. Legal Aid Society is funded by the Law Foundation, a philanthropic organization of B.C. lawyers. The government pays nominal fees to lawyers who take legal aid criminal cases and has recently extended these payments to cover uncontested divorces.

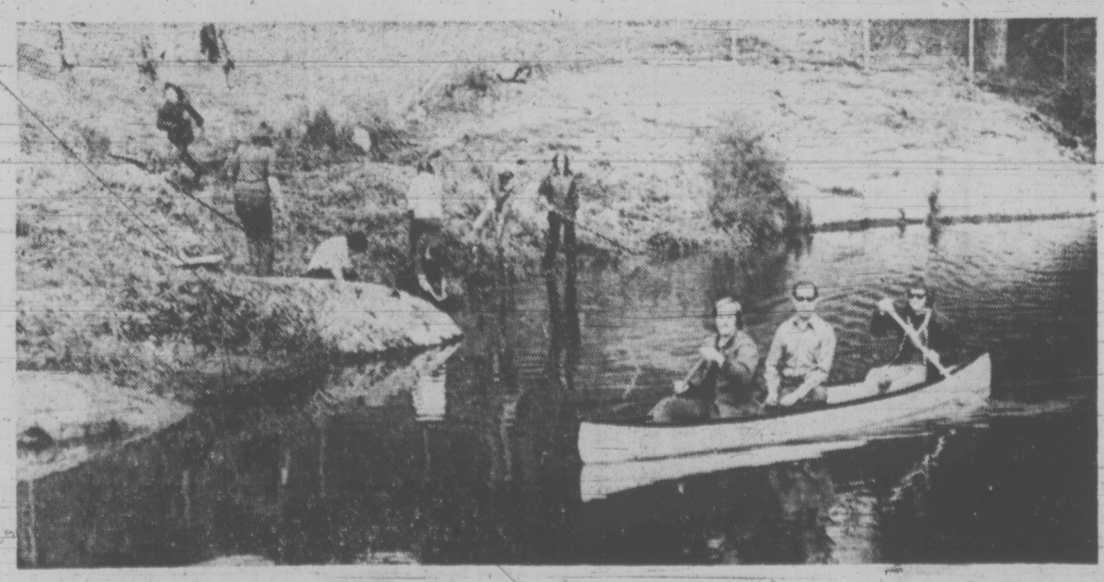
R.T.W.

A: The International Woodworkers of America, followed by the B.C. Teachers Federation, B.C. Government Employees union and Canadian Union of Public Employees.



"THE FISH ARE COMING BACK," exalts Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, being paddled by canoeist-teachers Steve Murphy and Phil Watt on Colquitz River Saturday. On shore, Colquitz Junior Secondary student volunteers take part in clean-up suggested by Curtis. The mayor had noticed an abandoned shopping cart, old tires and other debris in the stream which once was choked to a stagnant trickle. Student effort, filling a municipal truck with junk, was a "beautiful example of community involvement by students and I'm very proud of them," Curtis said.

HOW TO WRITE
A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc. for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action-Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call.

EVERYTHING KOSHER

Manchester Guardian

SOUTHAMPTON, Eng. — With 10 rabbis on board to supervise koshering procedures and 30 servicemen guarding its vital points, the Queen Elizabeth sailed on its month-long cruise to Israel Sunday shortly after reports were received that Israeli intelligence sources had heard rumors that Arab guerrillas planned a suicide mission against the 60,000-ton liner.

Some sources were talking of a kamikaze air attack, others of a speedboat loaded with explosives driven against the ship's hull. But aboard the QE-2 all was calm, secure and kosher.

"I think we are doing more good for world peace by making this voyage for Israel's 25th anniversary than by being scared off," said Rabbi Samuel Korff, spiritual leader of the 560, predominantly U.S., Jews aboard.

Cambodia Invaded By Saigon Forces

Times News Services

More South Vietnamese troops were reported moving toward the Cambodian frontier today following the first crossing of the border that Saigon forces are claimed to have made since the Vietnam ceasefire.

But in Saigon today, the South Vietnam military command formally denied its troops had penetrated Cambodian territory.

Spokesman Col. Le Trung Hein said that reports of a South Vietnamese army operation into Cambodia's Takeo region, as carried by foreign news agencies and radio stations, "are false."

"At the present time," he said, "the South Vietnamese army is not carrying out any operations on Cambodian territory."

However, journalists at Tinh Bien reported a regiment of South Vietnamese rangers, backed by 25 armored troop carriers, crossed the border between Chau Doc and Takeo to push back units of the North Vietnamese first division.

The reports indicated that the South Vietnamese operations along the border were defensive, aimed at driving Communist forces from the border rather than the start of a major offensive to lift the threat to Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital.

South Vietnamese air force gunships joined an armored column on the Cambodian side of the border, and new fighting was reported on the Vietnamese side of the frontier.

The Viet Cong called the march into Cambodia "a blunt and very dangerous act of the Saigon military forces."

A Viet Cong broadcast said the operation was ordered by the United States and "criminally violates the independence, unification, sovereignty, neutrality and territorial integrity of Cambodia as well as the Paris agreement and the international agreement on Vietnam."

The U.S. appeared more concerned with events in neighboring Laos. In Washington today, the defence department warned that because of new fighting in Laos, it may order U.S. planes to renew bombing campaigns there.

Pentagon spokesman Jerry Friedheim said North Vietnamese forces led by tanks had overrun the Laotian town of the Vieng, defended by Laotian government forces, within the last several hours.

He described it as "a major violation of the ceasefire."

He said an announcement about whether U.S. B-52 bombers had begun renewed strikes over Laos would come from Pacific command head-

Four Drown In Weekend Accidents

BILLY VOSPER
. . . drowning victim

Four persons from the Greater Victoria area, three of them from one family, lost their lives Saturday in two boating accidents on Vancouver Island.

Lost in the first accident which happened on Buttle Lake near Campbell River are WO John Daniel Vosper, 48, of 2356 Tacon; his wife Myrtle Lylian, 44, and their youngest son William Bentley, 11.

Dennis John Lynch, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Lynch of 1972 St. Anne, was drowned when the canoe in which he and Keith Gage-Cole, 25, of 2405 Hamiota, were shooting rapids near the mouth of the Nimpkish River overturned, throwing them into a whirlpool.

Although there were lifejackets in the two-seater canoe neither of the two men was wearing them at the time.

The Vospers' 14-year-old daughter, Linda Coleen, was also in the family's 10-foot aluminum boat when it was swamped, throwing the four into five-foot swells.

Vosper, who worked as a steward in the Chief Petty Officers' mess at CFB Esquimalt, was meet manager for the Coho Swim Club at the Centennial Pool in Langford.

Al Aylard, the team's coach, said today that Mrs. Vosper, too, was extremely active with the club.

"Mickey was a great woman," he said, "she worked very hard on all kinds of committees."

They were between two sets of rapids when their craft overturned. Gage-Cole managed to pull the canoe to shore and paddled about a mile downstream to a Crown Zellerbach campsite at Beaver Cove.

A campsite worker travelled two miles to Port McNeill and phoned the RCMP detachment at Port Hardy.

The police arrived on the scene at 8:45 p.m. They were joined in the search for Lynch's body by 24 people from the campsite and three crew members from the coast guard cutter Racer.

The search was resumed Sunday morning and divers found Lynch's body pinned on a ledge about 30 feet below the surface.

The search is still continu-

A Long Lonely Wait . . .

By STEPHEN BREWER
Special to The Times

CAMPBELL RIVER — Hoping against all reason, 14-year-old Linda Colleen Vosper watched Sunday as police divers braved the icy waters of Buttle Lake to search for the bodies of her father and brother.

The girl, who had been plucked from the same waters hours earlier, watched with little visible emotion.

By dusk, when police ended their search for the day, her tears had dried and her face had set in a mask of shock.

The tragedy which had befallen Linda had come home to her.

On Saturday she had been part of a family of four, pitching a camp in the Ralph River campground beside the lake, which was to become a common grave for her father and brother and the killer of her mother.

With the help of his wife, Myrtle Lylian, 44, and his son, William Bentley, 11, and Linda he pitched his tent trailer in a campsite at the provincial campground, 35 miles southwest of here.

After the tent was pitched the family loaded into their 10-foot aluminum boat to brave the choppy waters of the lake.

Then at about 3:30 p.m. tragedy struck.

Texas Twister Terror

Tornadoes slammed into three Texas towns Sunday killing eight persons and injuring 35. Flooding took two more lives. Property damage was estimated at several millions of dollars. Thunderstorms, hail and strong winds which followed hit almost every section of the state.

The first tornado hit Plainview, one of the homes damaged is shown above, in which three people were killed. Later, another twister hit Pearsall, killing five while the third tornado hit Corsicana, about 50 miles south of Dallas. The persons killed in the Pearsall twister were found alongside the freeway among pieces of cars.

Hooson Out Of City Post

By ROLAND MORGAN
Times Staff

Victoria city manager Bill Hooson was asked for his resignation by city council Friday, after just over two years in the $25,000 a year position.

Hooson's departure was effective immediately and his desk had been cleared today.

An official city hall bulletin from the mayor's office blamed Hooson's inability to keep up with "very substantial increases" in the complexity and load of the city administration. He is 52.

Ald. Percy Frampton said in an interview: "Bill's a hell of a good guy but he hasn't been well.

"In the last few months he hasn't been the executive officer we would have hoped.

"This is a pretty tough racket and a guy's got to be pretty tough."

Financial expert Jim Bramley, comptroller-treasurer, has been appointed acting city manager. He is the senior city executive.

"We've agonized over this for the past six months," Mayor Peter Pollen said.

He said the decision to ask for Hooson's resignation was reached in a closed meeting of council members Friday night and finalized on Saturday.

The social work graduate joined the city staff as assistant welfare officer in 1950 and began welfare administrator in 1951.

He was appointed assistant city manager in 1964 and took over the city from manager Dennis Young in December, 1970.

Hooson rarely sought or achieved headlines. One of his few appearances before the public eye was in 1968 when as assistant city manager he had to smash down the door of a reluctant householder in the Rose-Blanshard slum clearance scheme.

In 1972 Ald. Percy Frampton claimed Hooson was being bypassed in Mayor Pollen's new policy of encouraging aldermen to consult directly with city hall department heads.

The official statement said council would be asked to of-

'Esso Dealer' Ad Nonsense

A spokesman for automotive retailers in British Columbia today dismissed a protest advertisement by "concerned Esso dealers" as "nonsense."

J. Lloyd Kinneard, secretary of the Automotive Retailers Association, was commenting on a three-column page-deep advertisement in the Vancouver Province which called on the government to "set aside" the Energy Act which received legislative approval Saturday. (See Story Page 20).

The advertisement said that "even though the automotive industry has called for government legislation to deal with certain injustices taking place in our industry, we the concerned Esso dealers of B.C. do protest the speed with which Bill 148 (the Energy Act) has been rushed through legislature."

The anonymous dealers, who signed themselves "the concerned Esso dealers of B.C., their employees and families," said the Energy Act should have been set aside for necessary discussion.

They said the act could be detrimental to the public, is an encroachment on free enterprise, "takes away our basic rights under the Bill of Human Rights," that there has been insufficient time to study and make representations concerning the act and that the Energy Commission "has complete dictatorial powers unaffected by any judicial act."

GM TO HELP FIRENZA TRADE-IN

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — General Motors of Canada Ltd. announced today it is offering the original owners of its imported compact Firenza a $250 credit if they trade in their vehicles on a 1973 or future GM car.

The offer follows a series of complaints from owners of the British-made Firenza and the company's decision to stop importing the vehicle.

The Victoria distributor, Empress Pontiac Buick, says it has not heard from GM on the matter, but expects the credit will apply here, too.

Woman Slain In Revenge

BELFAST (AP) — A 59-year-old Protestant housewife answering a knock at her door, was killed about midnight Sunday night by gunmen who didn't see their victim.

Security forces say Margaret Miller might have been shot in revenge for the slaying 24 hours earlier of Robert Millen, 23, one of the few Protestants in the Irish Republican Army.

Four bullets ripped through the front door of Mrs. Miller's Belfast home, hitting her in the chest as she came down the hall to answer the door. Her killer jumped into a waiting car and escaped.

Millen was shot from a speeding car in Belfast Saturday night while on a vigilante patrol with other members of the IRA's Marxist Official wing. He was believed the first Protestant member of the largely Roman Catholic IRA to die since communal warfare broke out in Northern Ireland nearly four years ago.

The deaths of Mrs. Miller and Millen raised the confirmed fatality toll in the strife to 774.

Meanwhile, in Dublin, Sean MacStiofain, former chief of staff of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, was released from jail today and said: "I remain an unrepentant Republican separatist."

"I'm not well physically but in good spirits," he said.

His wife Maire picked him up at the military jail at the Curragh, an army camp west of Dublin.

Colcel Forests 'Under-Used'

Control of over nine million acres of valuable forest lands in northwest B.C. and the west Kootenays, by what was virtually an absentee landlord, has resulted in serious under-use of the resource, the legislature was told today.

Resources Minister Bob Williams said the land controlled by Columbia Cellulose Limited was effectively "enclosed" from the people of B.C. and the company's failure to manage it properly "has been a cost to this province."

He was moving second reading of a bill which would establish a new Crown corporation called British Columbia Cellulose Limited to manage the government's controlling interest in the operations of Columbia Cellulose Limited.

The legislation would also ratify an agreement signed April 2 under which the government will acquire 79 per cent of the assets of Canadian Cellulose Company Limited — Colcel's principal operating subsidiary — in return for guaranteeing long-term debts amounting to more than $70.5 million which are owed by Canadian Cellulose to bondholders, banks and investors.

Williams said the legislation is an attempt to meet the problems of two major regions of B.C. which include the northwest cities of Prince Rupert and Terrace as well as the communities of Revelstoke, Nakuskp and Castlegar in the southern interior.

He noted that the two "older line" parties, the Liberals and Conservatives, had supported similar legislation last week which would set up a crown corporation to manage the paper operation in the coastal town of Ocean Falls.

He said he welcomes that change of attitude, and added that the economic and "human problems" must merit similar support in the case of Colcel.

Williams said the principle involved is the same in ensuring the economic future and livelihood of not just a small community but a major region of the province.

He said the land involved — "one and a half times the size of the state of Switzerland" has been alienated in the same way that common lands in Britain were enclosed hundreds of years ago, and in the case of the Arrow Lakes that has meant "the trees have been grossly underused for decades."

MEDICINE BLOCKED

PINE RIDGE, S.D. (UPI) — A helicopter loaded with medical supplies was prevented from entering Wounded Knee Sunday by local Oglala Sioux Indians who vowed to keep all supplies out of the hamlet until militant Indians end their 48-day occupation.

Federal authorities, caught in the squeeze of trying to keep local peace and end the occupation without bloodshed, apparently gave in to the local Indians when the helicopter was turned back at federal roadblock No. 1.

Meanwhile, an attorney for American Indian Movement (AIM) members entrenched at Wounded Knee said in New York Sunday he would attempt to obtain a restraining order against the local Indians who set up the blockade of supplies.

Reports of sporadic shooting in the Wounded Knee area early Sunday remained unconfirmed today. A rancher, George Coats, said four armed men came to his ranch and drove off several head of his cattle.

There were no negotiations scheduled today between government officials and Indians occupying Wounded Knee. The militants possibly were awaiting the outcome of the scheduled court appearance of two AIM leaders in the U.S. district court at Pierre, S.D., today.

The band of about a dozen local Indians trying to prevent supplies from entering Wounded Knee set up their own roadblock outside the federal perimeter surrounding the hamlet and flatly rejected government requests to pull down the barrier.

The Indians called themselves "irate citizens" and the "original residents of Wounded Knee." They said their action was prompted by the government's failure to get militants to abandon their occupation.

Although the Indians involved were not the same ones who earlier set up a roadblock under direction of Oglala Sioux tribal chairman Dick Wilson, Wilson said he was "behind them 100 per cent."
